LOCAL AND PERSONAL

SANDERS-MERRITT.

Miss Jeanette Merritt, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Merritt of Hondo, became the bride of Mr. Frederick Sanders, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Sanders of Pearlsall, during the twilight hours of Monday, July 27, 1936, the simple ceremony being performed in the lovely garden of the Merritt home. Rev. L. W. Leel, pastor of the Uvalde Episcopal Church, in the vestments of his order, officiated.

The improvised altar held a basket of white dahlias and was placed in a setting of arbor vitae shrubs and a white latticed arch entwined with pink regina corona, against a background of hyacinth vines. On each side of the altar floor baskets held pastel colored zinnias. Vari-colored lights in the shrubbery, fragrant roses and Shasta daisies in their natural settings, added their beauty to the impressive scene.

Ushers were Misses Hettie Nester, Thelma Wilson, Irene Mechler and Lucy Davis, former classmates of the bride. Prior to the ceremony, Miss Mary Emma Finger, soprano, sang "Because", accompanied on the piano by Miss Frances Finger. The traditional processional and recessional marches by Mendelssohn were played by Miss Billie Merritt on the violin, accompanied by Miss Finger, who also softly rendered "Melody of Love" during the ceremony.

The bridal party entered through natural arches of shrubbery. The bride was preceded by her sister, Miss Milton Marie Merritt, as maid of honor, and little Miss Julia Mazelle Crow as flower girl. The maid of honor wore a smart garden frock of yellow shadow-blocked organza, made with a long, slightly flared skirt and fitted bodice, a double pleat of the material centered with tiny buttons extending from the simple neckline to the hem of the skirt in front. A narrow band of the pleating formed the short sleeves to complete the bodice which was girdled in crushed brown velvet. A large hat of brown straw with yellow daisy trim, and an arm bouquet of yellow marigolds completed her costume.

Little Miss Crow was dainty in a Kate Greenaway frock of pale blue organza over blue taffeta, the high waist tied with a shaded blue taffeta sash. Her blonde curls were banded with a blue satin ribbon and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of tiny Shasta daisies.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. Her lovely brunette coloring was enhanced by her bridal gown of sheer lace in dusty rose pink, fashioned on princess lines with a flared skirt and low cut bodice, over which was worn a fitted jacket made with a brief pelum, short puffed sleeves and an Elizabethan collar. Her picture hat was of pink horsehair braid with a band of twisted pink velvet and a large flat bow of the velvet. She carried an arm bouquet of white asters centered with a silver Centennial star. Her ornaments were a tiny gold cross, given to her mother by Bishop Johnson on the occasion of her baptism, and a turquoise ring, a gift to Mrs. Merritt by Mr. Merritt prior to their marriage twenty-five years ago.

The groom was attended by his brother, George Sanders, as best man. The men of the bridal party wore white linen suits.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held in the garden. The bride's cake, a ring-shaped confection, iced in white and embossed with pink wildroses and a blue bow-knot, the center filled with blue morning glories, centered a lace-covered table, and was presided over by Mrs. Horace Crow. The punch was served by Mrs. R. L. Jennings, assisted by Mrs. Max Wenmohs.

Later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Sanders left by motor for a bridal trip to Monterey, Saltillo and Mexico City, Mexico, the bride wearing a smart travel suit of navy blue crepe, made with a tunic and touches of white pique at the throat. Her accessories were navy blue.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Sanders will make their home in Pearlsall, where the groom is associated with his father in the mercantile business. Mrs. Sanders, a graduate of Hondo High School in 1932, attended C. I. A. and Texas University. Mr. Sanders received his early schooling in Pearlsall, attended Schreiner Institute for two years and received his B. A. degree from Texas University in June of this year.

There were about fifty guests, those from out-of-town being Mr. and Mrs. George Walker of Center Point, Dr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Merritt of Uvalde, Earl Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Sorrell, Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Bomhoff, Merritt Bomhoff, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Sanders, Mr. George Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Don Sanders, and Benton Roberts, all of Pearlsall. Rev. R. W. Leel of Uvalde, and Miss Syd Bloodworth of Kingsville.

Mrs. Merritt, the bride's mother, wore a lavender lace dress with a corsage of radiance roses. The mother of the groom was gowned in pale blue lace and her corsage was also of radiance roses. The bride's youngest sister, Miss Billie Merritt, wore a sheer white embroidered organza over pink taffeta and a pink velvet girdle adorned in back with pink French flowers.

Exposition to Honor Great Texan

JOHN NANCE GARNER

A special proclamation by Governor Alfred has proclaimed August 5th as John Nance Garner day, and the distinguished Vice President will be honored on that day by a tumultuous demonstration at the Centennial Exposition in Dallas. Thousands of Texans will converge upon Dallas in probably the greatest public ovation ever accorded a citizen of the Lone Star State. The Exposition is preparing to handle the gayest and largest crowd in its history.

"JOHN NANCE GARNER DAY" PROCLAIMED BY GOVERNOR.

Austin, July 29.—As a tribute to one of Texas' outstanding sons, Governor James V. Alfred has proclaimed August 5 "John Nance Garner Day", urging its observance by all Texans. The Texas governor also appealed to residents of the state to converge upon Dallas on that day, which has been designated as Garner Day at the Texas Centennial Central Exposition.

In his official proclamation Governor Alfred heaped praise upon Vice President Garner, during his 34 years of public service from his election to Congress, to the speakership and thence to the high office which he now holds.

THE PRIMARY.

Local interest in the primary of last Saturday centered mainly around the race for Representative in the Legislature from the 77th District.

In this race the voters were faced with the choice between a popular favorite of two years ago who was running for a second term and a former popular Hondo boy now in business in Uvalde. Friends of the latter put up a telling campaign for him that showed in the following county-wide result:

Monkhouse 1176
Caldwell 581
Over the district as a whole Monkhouse carried three out of the four counties of the District, all except Dimmit, winning by a majority of 1589 votes.

Following are the County totals in contested races:

Senator: Guy B. Fisher, 205; Price, 42; Bush, 27; Morris Sheppard, 897; Glenn, 30; Eagle, 262. Governor: Brooks, 132; F. W. Fischer, 79; Alfred, 1103; Sanderford, 105; Hunter, 279. Railroad Commissioner: Thompson, 638; Morris, 309; Rieger, 29; Johnson, 271; Hardin, 210. Comptroller of Public Accounts: Covington, 193; George H. Sheppard, 831; Sam Houston Terrell, 368; Commissioner General Land Office: Hawkins, 697; William H. McDonald, 835; Treasurer: Hopkins, 375; Adair, 122; Lockhart, 891. Superintendent: Woods, 932; Bullock, 574; Commissioner of Agriculture, Segrist, 166; J. E. McDonald, 464; George B. Terrell, 781; Day, 89. Chief Justice: Smith, 663; Burkett, 819. Congress, 15th District: West, 1064; Cofer, 585. Senator, 29th District: Win-1589 votes.

REVIVAL AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The people of Hondo and this section are invited to attend the revival meeting services at the Baptist Church, Hondo, beginning on Sunday night, August 9th. Rev. S. L. Cole, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Seguin, has been invited by our people to come and lead in this meeting. Rev. Mr. Cole is a pastor-evangelist and is doing a great work in Seguin where he has been pastor for seven years, and in meetings over the State. It is a joy to have him to come for this meeting. Those who have heard the messages of this young man say that he stirs the hearts of the people and is a blessing to everyone. He has just closed a meeting in East Texas and the pastor there says that it was the greatest meeting in the history of the church and town. Rev. Cole preaches a positive and heart-searching message that will make you think, but out of his heart full of love for the souls of the people. This will be an old time Gospel meeting. The need of the hour is for a great spiritual awakening.

Mr. Carl Head of San Antonio will lead the music for the meeting. This fine young Gospel singer has a unique way in his singing. There will be a fine choir directed by Mr. Head. He will also lead a big "booster choir" of children. Mr. Head wants all the children of Hondo to come and join his choir. He will teach them some beautiful songs and tell them some wonderful lesson-stories that will do them good. Regardless of what church you attend, bring your children and let them be in the children's group. Mr. Head has a wonderful voice and will sing a beautiful solo at each service.

The comfort of the congregation will receive due consideration so plan to be present every day at 9 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. Come early and hear and join in the good old time song service.

The people of other churches are invited to come and be in every service. And if you do not attend any church, you also are invited. The people of the communities and towns around this section are invited to come and enjoy this meeting. Great preparations are being made for this meeting. The committee will make further announcements at the church Sunday and thru the paper next week. Let us make this the best meeting that our city has ever had. Your co-operation and prayers will be needed and appreciated. Let us greet Bro. Cole with a full house at his first service Sunday night, August ninth.

Services next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, a pastor from San Antonio bringing the message.

CONTRIBUTOR.

HONDO METHODIST CHURCH.

We are very appreciative of the good attendance that we had at church last Sunday morning; it was about the best attendance that we have had during the summer. We shall also appreciate a good attendance at the service next Sunday. Rev. J. J. Mason, the Presiding Elder of the Uvalde District will be with us next Sunday morning, and will bring the morning message, therefore, we shall look forward to a good attendance next Sunday.

This coming Sunday will be our regular monthly Communion Day, let's be present for the monthly occasion.

MR. AND MRS. HEATH HOSTS.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Heath were hosts to the Wednesday Night Bridge Club this week, entertaining with four tables of bridge. High score prizes were awarded Mrs. H. J. THE NON-METROPOLITAN PRESS.

By Clayton Rand.

Meeting in Maine, the National Editorial Association deliberated again over the weekly newspaper's share of the National Advertiser's dollar.

Forty-three percent of the buying power of the country lies in the so-called "rural areas" and while country weeklies may be "little fellows" in the aggregate, they are many times more important than the metropolitan press.

It may be easier to reach the masses by radio or through periodicals, the circulations of which run to millions but it is not the most effective salesmanship.

The intimacy of the local sheet with all its fire-side appeal carries personal weight, and it is not asking too much of its loyal readers to show a preference for those products advertised within its columns. Why shouldn't the manufacturer spend some of his advertising money in your community?

BITING THE POOR.

A tax expert recently observed that the new tax bill "barks at the rich—and bites the poor."

In other words, exhaustive analysis of the measure by competent accountants and statisticians shows that, under its provisions, some very large corporations may actually pay smaller taxes than they paid previously while some smaller corporations will pay greater taxes—taxes ranging up to 30 per cent of their income.

The bill is so complex and so confused in various sections, that no one really knows just what its ultimate effects will be. That is certainly not surprising—it was forced through with little debate, to facilitate the adjournment of Congress.

So it may turn out that a tax bill that was backed vociferously by "friends of the common people" picks the common people's pocket-book ruthlessly. If that happens, some good will follow for the public will awaken to the menace of punitive tax laws.—Industrial News Review.

STEP TOWARD STATE SOCIALISM.

"In asking the United States District Court in Alabama to invalidate the TVA power program, the nineteen utility companies in the valley are not only obeying the first instincts of self-preservation, but are asking judicial determination of a question . . . vitally important to the whole national economy . . ." says the Boston Transcript.

"Here is a matter which affects the future prosperity, the very life indeed, of a capital structure involving nearly a billion dollars and carrying the savings of stockholders in every part of the United States. If the Government succeeds . . . in putting the utilities out of business, either by subjecting them to a ruinous competition or forcing them to sell their properties at fire-sale prices, the investments made by American citizens of all degrees of wealth will prove practically worthless."

"From the standpoint of the government itself, the attempt to produce and distribute power in the Tennessee Valley is as ill-advised as it is unfair. Carried to completion, it will close plants which provide employment for thousands of citizens and will deprive states and cities of tax revenue which in the past year reached a total of nearly $15,000,000 . . . It is a step toward State Socialism which is being taken. And it is all being done without the consent of the people of the United States."

There, shorn of non-essentials, is the issue of the TVA presents. And it must be remembered that TVA is but one phase of a gigantic planned program—its proponents look forward to the day when similar super-legal authorities will be established in every important area of this country. Furthermore, no court decision, favorable or unfavorable to TVA, can settle the issue. The final answer will be up to the people—they must decide whether they will permit public servants to destroy with impunity private enterprise, and whether private enterprise is to be thrown overboard in favor of the alien theory of State Socialism.—Industrial News Review.

Governor Landon Accepts Republican Presidential Nomination—Organized Labor Schism Widens—Spain Torn by Bloody Civil War.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

GOV. ALF. M. LANDON now knows officially that he is the Republican nominee for President of the United States. Before more than 100,000 of his fellow citizens he stood at the south entrance of the Kansas capitol in Topeka and received the formal notification from Congressman Snell of New York, who was permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention. Around him were grouped a thousand leaders of the party, and in front of him were the throngs of his supporters and admirers who had gathered from far and near to do him honor and to witness the ceremonies. Trains, automobiles, buses and airplanes had been pouring them into Topeka for several days and the gaily decorated little city was crowded to the limit. Everyone was happy and enthusiastic and everyone appeared confident that Landon would be the next chief executive of the country.

Gov. Landon

The nominee's speech of acceptance was the plain spoken, outright kind of talk his hearers expected. Asking divine guidance to make him worthy of the faith and confidence shown in him, he said:

"This call, coming to one whose life has been that of the everyday American, is proof of the freedom of opportunity which belongs to the people under our government."

Here, briefly, is what Mr. Landon had to say on some of the more vital issues:

Recovery—"The record shows that these (New Deal) measures did not fit together into any definite program of recovery. Many of them worked at cross-purposes and defeated themselves. The nation has not made the durable progress, either in reform or recovery, that we had the right to expect. . . . We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy, and from private monopolistic control."

Relief—"Let me emphasize that while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters."

Agriculture—"We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies in connection with a national land use and flood prevention program—and keep it all out of politics. Our farmers are entitled to all of the home market they can supply without injustice to the consumer. We propose a policy that protects them in this right. . . . We propose to pay cash benefits in order to cushion our farm families against the disastrous effects of price fluctuations and to protect their standard of living."

Labor—"The right of labor to organize means to me the right of employees to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry. It means that, in the absence of a union contract, an employee has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union."

Constitution—"It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change. The people have the right, by the means they have prescribed, to change their form of government to fit their wishes. . . . But change must come by and through the people and not by usurpation. . . . The Republican party, however, does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government."

State Rights—"There has now appeared in high places a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves. In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this is the most important question now before us. Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?"

FATHER COUGHLIN, the Detroit "radio priest" who in a speech before the recent Townsendite convention called President Roosevelt a "great betrayer and liar," has realized the impropriety of his language. He has published an open letter to the President offering his "sincere apology." The priest also says:

"As my President I still respect

you. As a fellow citizen and as a man I still regard you highly, but as an executive, despite your excellency's fine intentions, I deem it best for the welfare of our common country that you be supplanted in office."

Dispatches from Rome said Father Coughlin's speech caused a "painful impression" at the Vatican, and Bishop Gallagher, the priest's ecclesiastical superior, leaving for a visit to the Vatican, intimated he might report on the incident.

IT SEEMS at this time that nothing can prevent the great schism in the ranks of American organized labor. John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, and his followers in the industrial union movement, are determined to go ahead with their plans for the organization of steel workers into a mass union, and now have expanded their program, proposing to unionize thus the employees of steel fabrication and processing plants. Moreover, Lewis and his associates have declared they will not appear before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to stand trial on charges of "fomenting insurrection," so it appears the council can do nothing but suspend the rebels and their unions, these constituting about one third of the federation's membership. If this is done, the final decision as to expulsion of these unions will be made by the national convention in Tampa in November.

The members of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the Lewis group, assert the contemplated proceedings of the council are unwarranted by the constitution of the federation.

Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, gave out the news of the CIO drive to gather in the steel fabricators and processors, who number between 300,000 and 400,000 men. As there are about 446,000 employees in the steel mills, the goal of the CIO is now the organization of more than three quarters of a million steel workers.

SPANISH Fascists and royalists, in rebellion against the leftist government, were temporarily in control of most of the northern part of the country and were moving on Madrid from Burgos and Segovia, threatening to bomb the capital from the air if the government did not capitulate.

ties a vessel of the American Export line was hastening there to evacuate Americans, whose lives were in danger. Catalonia had declared against the rebels.

The rebels gained possession of San Sebastian, near the French border, and the loyalists were said to be making a desperate attempt to recover that town. This is the place where Claude G. Bowers, American ambassador, is in summer residence, and as communications were completely disrupted there was much anxiety in Washington as to Mr. Bowers' safety.

Socialists, Communists and workers in large numbers were joining the loyal troops for the defense of Madrid, and also helped in crushing the rebellion in several towns, according to the claims of the government.

In the south, where Gen. Francisco Franco commanded the revolutionaries, there was almost continuous fighting, and in the engagements between rebel planes and loyal warships some bombs and shells struck the Rock of Gibraltar and others fell close to a British destroyer. The latter fired warning shots and the acting governor of Gibraltar protested to General Franco.

THROUGH an executive order of President Roosevelt, all postmaster appointments in the future are to be subject to civil service examination. The order affects 13,730 postmaster positions of the first, second and third classes as vacancies occur. Incumbents chosen for reappointment must pass a non-competitive examination, as must employees promoted to postmaster. In other cases the examinations will be open and competitive. Fourth class postmasters already were under civil service.

COL. AND MRS. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH flew in a borrowed plane from London to Berlin, and were given a big reception by high Nazi officials, the press and the populace. The colonel was the guest of the air ministry at a luncheon attended by Germany's best aviators.

EXPLANATIONS and apologies are not enough for J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation, who was angered by the revelation that the doings of his "G men" had been under investigation by secret service men of the Treasury department. His strenuous protests started an inquiry that at this writing is still going on. Mr. Hoover also heard a rumor that some one was probing his "brokerage accounts," and this didn't help to calm him. Said he: "Anybody making such an inquiry is wasting his time. I have no brokerage accounts, so any effort to find them will be futile."

It is admitted by the Treasury that the secret service has no legal right to investigate the actions of any other government department.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE, addressing the International Baby Chick association in Kansas City, discussed at length the drouth situation and the measures taken or contemplated for relief. He suggested this four-point program for the protection of both farmers and consumers:

1. Judicious commodity loans, especially in years of excessive supplies.
2. The ever normal granary.
3. Crop insurance.
4. Government purchase of land which definitely never should have been plowed.

SCATTERED rains over limited areas brought only temporary relief from the heat and drouth, and then warm weather started a new advance over the corn belt. The federal crop reporting board in Washington said the drouth was as severe as that of 1934 and worse than any previous drouths since the western country was settled. The serious conditions prevailed over practically the entire area from the Rocky mountains in Montana to the Hudson valley in New York and southward over western Pennsylvania, central Maryland, the Ohio valley, parts of Arkansas, and most of Oklahoma.

M. L. Cooke

It was announced in Washington that President Roosevelt had created a national committee to study measures for remedying conditions in the drouth region through utilization of natural resources. The committee is headed by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Other members are Col. Richard C. Moore of the army engineers; John C. Page, acting commissioner of the bureau of reclamation; Frederick H. Fowler of the national resources committee; Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

IN OLYMPIA, Greece, scene of the first Olympic games, a torch was lighted by the rays of the sun and a Greek runner seized it and started it on a 12-day relay to the sports field in Berlin where the Olympic flame is to be lighted on August 1. Five thousand distinguished persons were selected to carry the torch, these including King Boris of Bulgaria, King Peter of Yugoslavia, and a long list of princes, statesmen and sportsmen. On the last leg it was to be borne by S. Loues of Greece, winner of the marathon in the games of 1896. A hundred thousand youths will accompany Loues in a parade to the stadium.

UNLESS the protests of Poland are effective, all opposition to Nazi power in the Free City of Danzig is due to be crushed. Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Danzig senate, which is controlled by Nazis, has issued administrative decrees ordering:

1. Dissolution of any organization whose members, with knowledge of its executive board, spreads news "endangering the state interest."
2. Prohibition of review by the courts of police measures of a political nature, including those aimed at the right of assembly, the press, and free speech.
3. Prohibition of Jewish ritual slaughtering for food purposes.
4. Imposition of three month protective custody on persons declared to be "endangering the public peace."

Thus the city's constitution is virtually set aside, and the Poles especially, having extensive economic interests there, are indignant.

REVOLT of the Cantonese against the Nanking government has collapsed and latest reports say government troops have entered Canton and taken over maintenance of peace and order. There was no opposition and the city was quiet.

Chen Chi-tang, the Canton war lord, deserted his followers and fled to Hongkong on a gunboat. There was a scramble to find Chen's alleged silver hoard, said to amount to many million dollars, but much of it is believed to be deposited in foreign banks.

EIGHT signatories to the Lausanne post-war treaty have granted to Turkey the right to militarize the Dardanelles, and they, with Turkey, have signed a convention covering the matter. Only Japan made slight reservations because it is no longer a member of the League of Nations.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—The steel industry of the United States has cast for itself a role in the forthcoming campaign—whether it intended to do so or not. The same is true of John L. Lewis and his segment of organized labor—and it is pretty generally suspected that Mr. Lewis intended to get labor questions well mixed up in politics. It is all more important because of President Roosevelt's attack on "economic royalists" in his Philadelphia acceptance speech.

Whatever rights the steel industry has or whatever rights Mr. Lewis and his followers have, the fact remains that they are all knee deep in politics and there is every reason to believe that each side will suffer in public esteem as a result. It means simply this: each side is mixing up problems that are basically economic in character with sordid, even unclean, political motives.

This outburst is prompted by two things: the gigantic steel industry has taken the position that it will defend itself against encroachment of professional labor leaders like Mr. Lewis and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and their satellites "from any source." The steel industry thereby has thrown down the challenge and now that such a die is cast, the steel industry will be compelled to do a number of indefensible things if it adheres to its program.

The same condition is to be observed in the organized labor situation. Whether Mr. Lewis is willing to admit it or not, his declaration that he will foster, even enforce, his scheme for organizing the steel workers is likely to lead to overzealous acts by his followers—and overzealous and foolish acts all too frequently lead to bloodshed.

For a number of years, steel companies have refused steadfastly to recognize union labor as represented by the professional leaders in the American Federation of Labor. They have attempted to defeat the inroads of that organization by forming what is known as company unions, groups of employees on the pay roll of each corporation. They have accorded to these groups the right of collective bargaining and have insisted that they would deal only with the representatives of the company unions for the reason that they believe they then are dealing with the employees concerned with questions of pay and working conditions in that particular plant. If the national unions were recognized, officials of a given company always have had to negotiate with the expert union negotiators who are paid by the national organization. The results have not always been happy. This combination of circumstances, together with a disposition on the part of the steel companies, I am afraid, to be rather selfish in their attitude toward labor has developed a continuing controversy that has raged over the last score of years.

It happened that the rather insolent announcement of the steel companies, their challenge, came almost simultaneously with the delivery of President Roosevelt's speech accepting the Democratic nomination for re-election. It was in this speech, it will be remembered, where Mr. Roosevelt denounced "economic royalists," in which he resorted to expressions bound to create class hatred and in which he used language that is certainly going to help discredit corporations which are large enough to attract national attention. Of course, I know that Mr. Roosevelt did not have the steel industry particularly in mind in his assault on massed capital but the effect is the same as though he had been shooting directly at the steel industry because of the coincidence mentioned above.

From all of the inside discussions that I have heard, it appears that the issue between the steel industry and its workers is no longer simply whether the steel industry shall be unionized. It is a question of how it shall be unionized. In addition to this, Mr. Lewis has been chiseling away for several years in promoting his labor union idea of organizing all workers in one unit instead of the craft union idea that is basic in the American Federation of Labor. That is to say, Mr. Lewis proposes to have a steel union or a shipbuilding union or a textile union instead of organizing the workers in accordance with the particular jobs they do, whether they be engineers, painters, carpenters, molders or any one of the various other crafts.

The incident to which I have referred is an outstanding example of inconsideration and such things always cause citizens to have a hurt feeling, a feeling that the government changed the rules without consulting those who must obey the rules.

I have no doubt at all that the Treasury's reason for changing the rule while the game was being played will result in a considerable amount of revenue for the government. But there are many who believe, as I do, that the department in all fairness should have issued its regulation to become effective at some fixed date in the future in order that citizens who must comply with it would be prepared by proper notification of what they were expected to do and the penalties for failure to obey. The incident to which I have referred is an outstanding example of inconsideration and such things always cause citizens to have a hurt feeling, a feeling that the government changed the rules without consulting those who must obey the rules.

Since the steel industry has its company unions, there is a conviction in many quarters that Mr. Lewis might well pause to consider whether this is the time to carry forward his program of bringing steel workers under national labor union control. There are those who believe that the company unions eventually will become units in the larger labor structure of the country and, if that be true, it is made to appear that Mr. Lewis has hurt labor's cause.

On the other hand, the steel industry already is under attack by the government. Mr. Roosevelt suddenly "cracked down" on some of the major companies recently, charging them with collusion in bids on government work. He came out with this charge at a time which undoubtedly will stiffen the backbone of the union agitators—and it is not unlikely that by the same token he has stiffened the resistance which the steel companies will use.

Yet, it does seem that the steel companies made a fatal mistake in the pronouncement they have issued. There are too many people who will be inclined to believe that the steel companies have taken advantage of an apparent assurance of collapse of federal supervision. There are few who believe that the federal compulsory collective bargaining statute will last very long but the fact that this statute is due for the discard, it seems to me, hardly warrants the action which the steel companies have taken. They are no more warranted in that than union labor is warranted in taking advantage of the political situation to feather their own nest. A real danger, in addition to this, is that Communist agitators are going to use this situation as one vehicle for spreading their propaganda of dissatisfaction and discontent and Mr. Roosevelt's attack on massed capital unfortunately lends itself to the nefarious schemes of the Reds.

It long has been said that the method of administering laws frequently has created more dissatisfaction among the citizens than the requirements of laws themselves. Tax laws of whatever kind furnish a splendid example. It has always been true since we have had income tax laws that taxpayers have complained more about bureaucratic regulation, indecision, lack of uniformity in administration and, generally speaking, slow processes of settlement than about the amount they were required to pay. The same is true about our customs laws despite the fact that they affect fewer persons directly.

The other day the Treasury issued a notice to customs inspectors that was "effective immediately." It was a change in policy respecting the quantity of goods an individual may bring in from foreign shores without the payment of the customs tax. Since 1798 or thereabouts, there has been a law which permitted a returning American to bring in commodities of whatever kind he desired, except narcotics, up to $100 in value but that law permitted the Treasury to make exceptions. The Treasury notice the other day was an announcement of an exception to this $100 exemption. It said that no inbound traveler could carry more than one wine gallon of liquor without the payment of the customs tax thereon. A practice had sprung up since the import duty on liquors has been made so high of returning tourists bringing in almost the full exemption in liquor alone. Probably the practice was getting very bad and no one questions the judgment of the Treasury in determining policy. But it is the method employed in making this change that has aroused criticism.

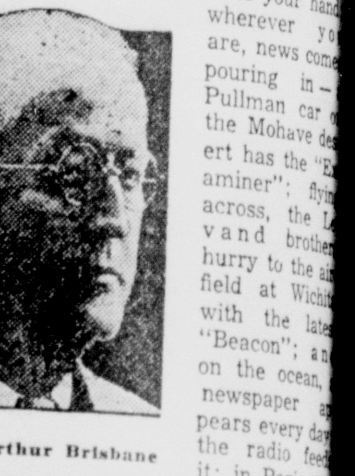

In ordering the new regulation "effective immediately," the Treasury forced upon hundreds of travelers the necessity for paying duty on their personal stocks of liquor in what amounts to a surprise order. They had left foreign shores under one regulation and arrive under another.

I have no doubt at all that the Treasury's reason for changing the rule while the game was being played will result in a considerable amount of revenue for the government. But there are many who believe, as I do, that the department in all fairness should have issued its regulation to become effective at some fixed date in the future in order that citizens who must comply with it would be prepared by proper notification of what they were expected to do and the penalties for failure to obey. The incident to which I have referred is an outstanding example of inconsideration and such things always cause citizens to have a hurt feeling, a feeling that the government changed the rules without consulting those who must obey the rules.

Paris: Of Many Newspapers Surprise for Karl Marx Mr. Eden Was Tired Out A Big Somersault

This world is really no bigger now, than the palm of your hand wherever you are, news comes pouring in—times as many newspapers as are published in New York tell anything you choose to believe from editorials written by men who do not know that the royal and imperial French families died in were buried after the war of 1870 to fiery-eyed moderns who think they can graft Karl Marx and Lenin on Jacques Bonhomme, the French peasant, and produce a French Utopia, with a Russian accent and a pair of high boots.

They do not know Jacques Bonhomme, who bought his land in the revolution at bargain prices with inflated assignats, and means to keep it, nor do they know the small sized French bourgeois, who think more of one four-cent franc than some of our governing gentlemen think of a billion 50-cent dollars. The Marx-Stalin-Lenin brotherhood in America, by the way, do not understand the inside feelings of the U. S. A. citizen, with his bungalow, automobile, radio set, washing machine and furniture, a "nearly paid for."

Send HIM, instead of a bill for his last installment, the statement "No more private property," and see what he says and does.

You take your choice of doses of Paris daily newspapers; the will kind, that say anything and less money; the tame kind, that say nothing and make money, but very little of it; the mummified kind, that still take "Madame La Marmite" seriously, and think themselves back in the days of Madame De Deffand and Lord Basingbroke.

You have, also, newspapers from all the Lilliputian countries near—English, Italian, German—and the news is in them, only you must know how to extract it. They are queer little newspapers, and if they be provincialism, make the most of it.

In London, for instance, Lord Rothermere's newspaper tells you that Mr. Eden, British foreign secretary, has gone to "a secret destination" in the country for a week's rest.

English statesmen always go to "a secret destination," for reasons unknown to Mr. James Farley, who relaxes at the ringside, or President Roosevelt, who rests fishing on a battleship, with fifty reporters on another ship, nearby.

You wonder that a man as young as Eden should need a rest. Gladstone, at nearly twice his age, was talking in the Commons at four in the morning—but Gladstone is few, Tim Healy's also.

Rothermere's writer thinks Eden is all tired out after his General speech, telling just why England lifted the Italian sanctions. It was he who made a speech recently just as earnest and much louder telling why those sanctions must NEVER be lifted. That was turning a big somersault. The English know how to do that, and you are supposed not to laugh.

Eden told Baldwin what the doctor said, and Baldwin said, "By means, my boy, hurry off to a secret destination," and Eden hurried. In America, the business man would say, "Doctor, there are a few things that I must settle first, meaning, perhaps, his income tax. He would hang on and on, and finally go to a really secret destination in the graveyard."

Driving through Normandy, from Havre, where the ships land, you interest American farmers, especially any whose lands are "worn out" after comparatively few years of cultivation. On lands in this part of the world, wheat has been grown for three hundred years, and today yields better, bigger crops than ever.

In Rome, as in other places on the earth's surface, one city is piled on another. Dig down through the ruins and the other appears. Invasions, plagues, famines and the grinding ice have wiped them out.

Those that read this today are the descendants of men such as the inhabitants of the Stone Age village. And still we are worried, looking down at the enemy, poverty, and may climb up and attack us in the age.

"Wasting my time," Barry told Harwood, the next morning, in the city editor's busy office at The Globe. "My editor, and nearly a hundred dollars of time, and nearly a hundred dollars of the paper's money. Winslow had it straight. The Fane girl was strutting her stuff from one o'clock until long after the murder."

"Well, it's good to be sure." "Yes, and I'm mighty sure now. Every step I've taken since our last meeting leads right up to Mrs. Kelly."

Harwood looked at him quizzically. "Step No. 1?" he asked.

"My advertisement offering a reward for the number of the cab that killed that artist's wife."

"You don't mean that you got it?" "Triumphantly, Barry opened his note book.

"There it is," he said. "O26017. The figures under it are the number of the driver who gave me the information."

Ernie copied both numbers.

"Well, work," he commented. "Anything else?"

"Lots. This fellow had a passenger who got out at Twenty-third street around midnight. When the woman was killed—two hours later—the driver bumped into him again in Sixteenth street, very much rattled, and looking as though he'd committed a murder."

"Any description?" "Rather a vague one. That doesn't matter. I'm sure, in my own mind, that this passenger was the caller Kelly expected, and that he wasn't the murderer. I'm equally sure that he knew murder had been committed."

"Let's call it a mere supposition. In that case, Kelly was killed around two o'clock. At two o'clock, Mrs. Kelly wasn't in Harlem."

"How do you know that?"

Barry's answer was a full report of his adventures of Saturday. "Without Step No. 1, Step No. 2 means nothing. In other words, if Kelly'd been killed at midnight—which is the theory everyone's worked on—Mrs. Kelly's alibi would have been hopeless."

Harwood joined his finger-tips in an almost prayerful gesture. "I wish we could find the guy who looked as though he'd committed a murder."

Barry made no reply.

"That's always the trouble," the city editor went on. "What kind of a skate is this Luis Morano? Tough?"

"On the contrary. Cries over a mummy song."

"There's a heap of 'em do," Harwood philosophized.

"He's a Southerner, with a soft voice, and a funny impediment in his speech?"

"That so?" Harwood inquired. "Where is this Coconut Bar?"

Barry told him, and promptly returned to Mrs. Kelly. "How the deuce are we going to prove what she did after she got home?"

"That's up to you," Ernie said. "I'm off on a new tack now." His eyes twinkled. "One that would go a long way toward establishing your theory of coincidence. Gosh, I'd give my two uppers to break this story within the next week or two."

Thursday evening, Barry spent in his room, mostly thinking. He had telephoned Pat twice since their luncheon together, and found her enthusiastic over her guests. "There's nothing wrong with the boy," she declared; "nothing that a few weeks out here won't cure. He's on the beach now, with his mother."

Judge Hambridge had taken to the little fellow at once. Almost like having a grandchild. It kept his mind off his worries. And no one could see Peggy, being brave, but always staring at nothing, always thinking of what might happen, without pity that warmed into affection. "She's really an awfully good sort," Pat said, from Southampton. "I like her a lot. When are you coming out?"

"Tomorrow, I hope."

"Well, well, I expect you for dinner." That breach was healed, all right. Pat had called him "the scum of the earth." In the same hour, he remembered again, he had told her he loved her. As to that, she still maintained silence. "That's the kindest thing she could do," Barry thought. "A Judge's daughter, and I—"

Barry had learned not to think of the future. "Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum," as his own father had put it. Just for now, it was pleasant to be somebody who knew Pat—and he wanted to take that awful look out of the other girl's eyes. "That oughtn't to be hard now," Barry thought. "If I could get that Filipino to talk. He knows when Mrs. Kelly came home, and he's probably got a darned good idea what she did afterward. If we could get to that Oriental—"

At which point, Evans came, and he had been drinking.

"Sorry, sir," he apologized, taking the nearest chair. Evans had none of Willetts' compunctions. "Sorry, sir, but I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur."

"Liquid nourishment?"

"Yes, sir," Evans admitted, sheepishly. "But that was the only chance I had with that Irishman."

"Well?"

"Well, I drove Miss Hambridge, and Mrs. Rogers, and the boy to Southampton, like you said. And I started back today. It was nearly eight when I made the garage, and I was good and hungry."

"There's a decent cafe a few yards away. Nolan—that's Kelly's chauffeur—was sitting at a table, with a load he ought to've gone twice for," Evans smiled.

"Ed had a grouch on women in general. And he was chowed plenty. I hadn't been with him long when he opened up on Mrs. Kelly. There's something queer between her and this Filipino, he says."

"Charlie?"

"That isn't his name, but let it go at that. And, when Ed said 'queer,' he didn't mean anything wrong. Just some kind of an understanding. Mrs. Kelly's been giving the Chink coin and jewelry, regular. Charlie showed him some of it, Ed says."

"Well, the night of the murder Nolan drives Kelly to the Coconut Bar. And home—at nine o'clock. When he gets out at his house, Kelly says, 'Put the car in the garage. Mrs. Kelly's gone up to Harlem, and I won't need you 'til tomorrow morning.'"

"Ed obeys orders. He goes back to Kelly's, and sits in the kitchen. This Chink is in the butler's pantry, getting a tray ready. And, while the two of 'em are down there, the damnedest row starts upstairs—"

"Rogers and Kelly."

"No. This was around nine o'clock. Mrs. Kelly. She was laying Mike out so you could have heard it a block."

Ernie Copied Both Numbers.

Well, this goes on for ten or fifteen minutes, and then the bell from the parlor rings. Charlie starts upstairs with the tray. He gets up two steps, when Kelly appears at the head of the flight. "Come up here, you lousy spy. Come up here while I tell you where you get off!"

"Charlie sets down the tray, and goes. Nolan follows into the pantry, and has a stiff drink. Then he sits down again, and listens to Kelly laying out the Chink."

"Could he hear anything? Words, I mean?"

"No. Just Kelly's voice. Mrs. Kelly was out of it. She'd gone to her room. Nolan thinks. But Kelly made noise enough for two. And, after another ten minutes or so, Charlie comes back."

"I'm fired," Charlie says—in the Chink lingo. "I got to get out. That blankety-blank told me to go quick, or he'd kill me."

"Are you going?" Nolan asks.

"Sure," the Chink says. "I got to get my money first. He chased me out of the room when I asked for it, but I'm going back," the Chink says.

"Nolan then took the cook to a movie, and when they get back, everything's quiet. It's after midnight, because these two walked home. Kelly's upstairs, talking to somebody, and the Chink's in his room, packing and muttering to himself something frightful. So Nolan says good night to the cook, who goes into her room, and then Nolan slips into the pantry, and takes another shot of that hooch."

"What hooch?"

"The rye whiskey I was telling you about."

Barry sprang from his chair.

"The rye whiskey?"

"Sure. And it was in a cut-glass decanter."

"Are you certain?"

"Nolan is. And he's just as certain that it was still in the pantry when the guy upstairs left."

"Why?"

"Because he heard the front door close ten seconds before he went out the back way."

"Gosh!" Barry exclaimed. "That puts it up to Mrs. Kelly, all right."

Evans shook his head, drunkenly.

"Mrs. Kelly wasn't home," he said. "She went to her sister's after the high-jinks in Harlem, and Nolan got her there the next morning, before they called the police. There were only three people in that house after the guy went who was visiting Kelly—Kelly himself, cook, and a mighty mad Chinaman."

"Filipino."

"Whatever he was, he was mad, and the decanter that killed Kelly was downstairs with him until just about the time Kelly was killed."

"Thanks," Barry nodded. "I think we've got something."

"Oh, I forgot to give you this. It came—to Southampton—just as I was leaving," said Evans.

"This" was a cablegram. Alone, in the smoke-filled room, Barry opened it. Nine words. "Father and I sailing for home Sunday. Love. Mother."

For an instant, he stood, frozen, the wire in his hand.

Directly before him, an evening newspaper lay open on the table.

"Out-going passenger and mail ships," he read. "Sailing tomorrow—Steamship Oranje Nassau. For Port-au-Prince, La Guayra, Curacao, Maracaibo, Carupano, and Pampatar. I'm on my way to one of 'em tomorrow!"

CHAPTER IX

Barry's panic was short-lived.

Between him and the sailing list had come a vision of Peggy, with beaded lashes screening eyes forever staring at nothing.

"I can't do it," he said to himself. "I can't run away and leave that girl in the lurch. Nor Pat either. I've tackled this job, and I've got to go through with it."

"Anyway, it begins to look as though the end were in sight. If Ridder sails Sunday—"

He went back to the shipping news. "If Ridder sails Sunday, that's the Bremen and she's due here the following Saturday. That gives us eight days. I'd better see Winslow."

He called Peter next morning, but the attorney was in the country. "Left last night," his secretary reported, "and won't be back until Monday."

Barry had a dinner engagement at Southampton. "We'll start things humming on Monday," Barry told himself. "I've got my house to put in order, too. Ridder's house, that is."

Evans telephoned around ten, and before noon they were on their way to Southampton. "My last week-end with Pat," he was thinking. "Where'll I be next Saturday? Out of luck, and out of a job. In jail, maybe, and in the newspapers. That's my finish with—everybody."

There was a new atmosphere at the Hambridge's. Pat had been right in telling Jack that he'd "cheer my father up a lot." "They're building a railway on the beach," she laughed, when the boy—sunburned, and active—joined them before dinner.

"You must go to bed now," Pat bade him, "if we're to take our ride in the morning. We have a canter every day before breakfast," she added to Barry, ringing for a maid to take charge of the youngster. "I discovered the dearest little pony in the village, and the man brings it over at nine o'clock, with another horse for me. Jack's getting to be a regular Buffalo Bill."

The strained expression of a week ago was beginning to disappear from the face of Judge Hambridge. But the greatest difference was in the boy's mother. Naturally imitative, as Barry had remarked, she had been quick to observe and emulate Pat's moderation with make-up. Her speech, too, had lost all but an occasional inadvertent reference to "guys" and "dames." She had stopped staring into space. "What's the news about Jack?" she asked, quite calmly.

"Free next week," Barry declared ringingly.

At the dinner table, in spite of herself, Peg caught some of the contagion of Barry's new confidence. Nolan's story sounded like the solution of everything, they agreed. "We've got to get Jack out before Saturday," Barry said. "His father'll be home then."

Both women looked up at him.

"What'll happen to you?" Peggy asked.

"The main question," Barry urged, "is what's going to happen to Peg and Jack. And Jacky."

"We'll meet that when it comes," Peggy returned, steadily. "But now I'm worried about you."

She excused herself early, with the plain purpose of leaving Barry with Pat. But the Judge stayed on. His legally trained mind had been busy with the Nolan disclosures.

"If Mrs. Kelly slept at her sister's, why didn't she say so to you? It would've been her best alibi."

"Yes, but it would have involved admitting that she'd had a run-in with Kelly."

"That's true," Hambridge admitted. "But Nolan was drunk last night, you say. And some parts of his story simply don't hold water. I don't believe there was anything 'queer' between Mrs. Kelly and the Filipino. Kelly's finding that out wouldn't account for his calling the man a 'lousy spy,' would it?"

"No," Barry retorted. "But listen. If the Chink was a 'lousy spy,' he got paid for it, didn't he? Wouldn't that explain Mrs. Kelly's giving him 'coin and jewelry? And everything else? The Chink's reporting Betty Barclay's message, and all the rest of it? I tell you, this story's as straight as a string. Betty Barclay went on the road with her show about the time Mrs. Kelly sued for divorce. I found that out some time ago. She got back the day of the murder, and phoned Kelly. Mrs. Kelly learned of that from the Chink, and lit into Mike. Then Mike lit into the Chink, and the Chink killed him. I think we can prove that."

The Judge shook his head.

"Anyway, it certainly establishes reasonable doubt of Jack's guilt."

"They can't convict Jack," the Judge insisted. "Peter says so, and I've never known Peter to be wrong when he made an assertion like that. But acquittal means waiting for the trial, and waiting for the trial means that Jack will still be in jail when his father returns."

Pat remained silent, but the next morning, on the beach, she drew Barry away from the little group engaged in railroad construction.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

THE death of Thomas Meighan may not mean very much to the younger movie-goers, but it will shock those who remember him as one of the big stars of the days of silent pictures. Like many stage stars, he was not too sure at first that he would like pictures.

But he did "The Miracle Man" and with it hit his stride. Oddly enough, Lon Chaney made his name in that picture too. And so did Betty Compson, who was finding it none too easy to climb the ladder of fame.

Nobody suspected that "The Miracle Man" would be such an epoch-making picture as it was. But it established its three leading actors as stars almost overnight.

And speaking of star-making pictures, see what's happened to the people who appeared in "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth," none of whom were well known in this country till it was released—and the rest of the world had acclaimed only Charles Laughton, of the cast.

But since then Laughton, Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Wendy Barrie and Binnie Barnes have been welcomed by Hollywood. All have been extremely successful in American pictures.

Since her marriage Jean Parker has been luckier than many Hollywood brides; she has had assignments that provided a pleasant honeymoon. First they went to Texas, on location with the company that was making "The Texas Ranger"; now they're off to Mammoth lake and the mountains for "King of the Royal Mounted." Now all she needs is an engagement with some company that's headed for Honolulu, Hollywood's pet honeymoon spot.

Joe Penner is going to make that picture at last. And because children have become sure-fire hits on the screen, he'll be assisted by Patsy Lee Parsons, a five-year-old who sings and dances. The dancing teachers of this land ought to give Shirley Temple a medal or something. Everywhere—even out in the country where you wonder where and how they can take dancing lessons, you see little girls doing tap dancing nowadays. And Shirley is responsible for that!

Just one more story of the way things happen in Hollywood. Samuel Goldwyn wanted a German actress for a role in "Come and Get It." He was sure that none of the local talent measured up. So he had old German films run off for him, for days and days, in the hope of seeing exactly the right actress in one of them. If he found her, of course he'd have to find out where she was, and put her under contract, and have her brought to California at once.

He found the girl in a picture called "Frederika" and the wheels began to turn. Then it was discovered that she is Mady Christians, who has been right in Hollywood for two years, yearning to make a lot of pictures but not getting too many assignments.

Remember Joan Crawford in "Dancing Lady"? The picture is being re-issued, not because of Joan's popularity, but because Fred Astaire had a small part in it. Nelson Eddy had a bit, too—just a flash and he's gone. And now see what fame the gentlemen have attained on the screen! Fred Astaire has achieved an unprecedented popularity in the gay night club type of vehicle; Nelson Eddy has become the idol of millions of movie-goers as well as radio listeners.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Don't miss "The Moon's Our Home" if you want to see a very funny picture . . . Richard Arlen has just entered the Vancouver $5,000 golf tournament; he'd rather golf than eat . . . Joe E. Brown and his wife went to Peoria, Ill., for the opening of his picture, "Earthworm Tractors," Peoria being the world's tractor center . . . This last year in radio has proved that the public doesn't care any more for programs that depend on gags instead of funny situations . . . And the fact that Ed Wynn failed to regain his former popularity is one proof of it . . . Rubino (and his violin) turned down an offer to reappear with Eddie Cantor . . . Constance Bennett, Simone Simon, Loreta Young and Janet Gaynor will work together in "Ladies in Love"—and Hollywood looks for displays of temperament from at least three of them before the picture's finished.

There are few village smithy shops today under the chestnut trees. One reason

A Village is that there aren't Blacksmith any more chestnut trees. Another is that the motor car is rapidly driving horses and vehicles drawn by horses out of business.

I used to think that in fifty years or more practically all the village smithies would disappear. But lately I have learned better.

Here in a little coast town in Maine is a village blacksmith who has more work than he can do, though he has probably not shod a horse or repaired an agricultural implement in twenty years or more.

For a time after the "devil wagons" began crowding horses and horse drawn vehicles off the road, he had little to do.

Then one day he saw some ornamental grill work that had been sent to his town to be used as an adornment on a new building.

He examined it carefully, then went home and thought a little.

"There is no reason in the world why I cannot do that kind of work," he said to himself. "I will do it, by Gosh."

Today the children still "love to see his flaming forge and hear the bellows blow."

Over the anvil on which he used to fashion horse shoes he makes beautiful things of steel and iron. Visitors seeing him at work have come in to inquire if his handiwork was on sale.

He assured them that it certainly was, and that more of the same kind of work would be in evidence as soon as there was a demand for it.

He is known today all over the state, and in many other states, whose residents have bought his work.

And if he had the advertising gift that some people have he would have a wide reputation. But not, I am sorry to say, a great business.

For his work is artistry, and cannot be done in quantity over a single anvil.

It cannot be said of him that he is another Benvenuto Cellini. He works in iron, not in silver and gold.

But he is a master craftsman, which he never might have become had he not been forced by changing conditions to become something besides the village blacksmith.

I saw him at work the other morning on a pair of beautiful andirons.

I asked him what they cost. "A lot of time," he said.

"Yes, but how much money?" "Oh, not so much. But the fellow I'm making them for isn't rich so I wouldn't like to charge him too much."

And there was proof that he really had the soul of an artist.

Governor Landon Accepts Republican Presidential Nomination—Organized Labor Schism Widens—Spain Torn by Bloody Civil War.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

Gov. ALF. M. LANDON now knows officially that he is the Republican nominee for President of the United States. Before more than 100,000 of his fellow citizens he stood at the south entrance of the Kansas capitol in Topeka and received the formal notification from Congressman Snell of New York, who was permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention. Around him were grouped a thousand leaders of the party, and in front of him were the throngs of his supporters and admirers who had gathered from far and near to do him honor and to witness the ceremonies. Trains, automobiles, buses and airplanes had been pouring them into Topeka for several days and the gaily decorated little city was crowded to the limit. Everyone was happy and enthusiastic and everyone appeared confident that Landon would be the next chief executive of the country.

Gov. Landon

The nominee's speech of acceptance was the plain spoken, outright kind of talk his hearers expected. Asking divine guidance to make him worthy of the faith and confidence shown in him, he said:

"This call, coming to one whose life has been that of the everyday American, is proof of the freedom of opportunity which belongs to the people under our government."

Here, briefly, is what Mr. Landon had to say on some of the more vital issues:

Recovery—"The record shows that these (New Deal) measures did not fit together into any definite program of recovery. Many of them worked at cross-purposes and defeated themselves. The nation has not made the durable progress, either in reform or recovery, that we had the right to expect. . . . We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy, and from private monopolistic control."

Relief—"Let me emphasize that while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters."

Agriculture—"We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies in connection with a national land use and flood prevention program—and keep it all out of politics. Our farmers are entitled to all of the home market they can supply without injustice to the consumer. We propose a policy that protects them in this right. . . . We propose to pay cash benefits in order to cushion our farm families against the disastrous effects of price fluctuations and to protect their standard of living."

Labor—"The right of labor to organize means to me the right of employees to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry. It means that, in the absence of a union contract, an employee has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union."

Constitution—"It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change. The people have the right, by the means they have prescribed, to change their form of government to fit their wishes. . . . But change must come by and through the people and not by usurpation. . . . The Republican party, however, does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government."

State Rights—"There has now appeared in high places a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves. In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this is the most important question now before us. Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?"

you. As a fellow citizen and as a man I still regard you highly, but as an executive, despite your excellency's fine intentions, I deem it best for the welfare of our common country that you be supplanted in office."

Dispatches from Rome said Father Coughlin's speech caused a "painful impression" at the Vatican, and Bishop Gallagher, the priest's ecclesiastical superior, leaving for a visit to the Vatican, intimated he might report on the incident.

IT SEEMS at this time that nothing can prevent the great schism in the ranks of American organized labor. John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, and his followers in the industrial union movement, are determined to go ahead with their plans for the organization of steel workers into a mass union, and now have expanded their program, proposing to unionize thus the employees of steel fabrication and processing plants.

Moreover, Lewis and his associates have declared they will not appear before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to stand trial on charges of "fomenting insurrection," so it appears the council can do nothing but suspend the rebels and their unions, these constituting about one third of the federation's membership. If this is done, the final decision as to expulsion of these unions will be made by the national convention in Tampa in November.

The members of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the Lewis group, assert the contemplated proceedings of the council are unwarranted by the constitution of the federation.

Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, gave out the news of the CIO drive to gather in the steel fabricators and processors, who number between 300,000 and 400,000 men. As there are about 446,000 employees in the steel mills, the goal of the CIO is now the organization of more than three quarters of a million steel workers.

SPANISH Fascists and royalists, in rebellion against the leftist government, were temporarily in control of most of the northern part of the country and were moving on Madrid from Burgos and Segovia, threatening to bomb the capital from the air if the government did not capitulate.

C. G. Bowers

In Barcelona, capital of Catalonia, fierce fighting was reported, and at the request of the Washington authorities a vessel of the American Export line was hastening there to evacuate Americans, whose lives were in danger. Catalonia had declared against the rebels.

The rebels gained possession of San Sebastian, near the French border, and the loyalists were said to be making a desperate attempt to recover that town. This is the place where Claude G. Bowers, American ambassador, is in summer residence, and as communications were completely disrupted there was much anxiety in Washington as to Mr. Bowers' safety.

Socialists, Communists and workers in large numbers were joining the loyal troops for the defense of Madrid, and also helped in crushing the rebellion in several towns, according to the claims of the government.

In the south, where Gen. Francisco Franco commanded the revolutionaries, there was almost continuous fighting, and in the engagements between rebel planes and loyal warships some bombs and shells struck the Rock of Gibraltar and others fell close to a British destroyer. The latter fired warning shots and the acting governor of Gibraltar protested to General Franco.

THROUGH an executive order of President Roosevelt, all postmaster appointments in the future are to be subject to civil service examination. The order affects 13,730 postmaster positions of the first, second and third classes as vacancies occur. Incumbents chosen for reappointment must pass a non-competitive examination, as must employees promoted to postmaster. In other cases the examinations will be open and competitive. Fourth class postmasters already were under civil service.

COL. AND MRS. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH flew in a borrowed plane from London to Berlin, and were given a big reception by high Nazi officials, the press and the populace. The colonel was the guest of the air ministry at a luncheon attended by Germany's best aviators.

EXPLANATIONS and apologies are not enough for J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation, who was angered by the revelation that the doings of his "G men" had been under investigation by secret service men of the Treasury department. His strenuous protests started an inquiry that at this writing is still going on. Mr. Hoover also heard a rumor that some one was probing his "brokerage accounts," and this didn't help to calm him. Said he: "Anybody making such an inquiry is wasting his time. I have no brokerage accounts, so any effort to find them will be futile."

It is admitted by the Treasury that the secret service has no legal right to investigate the actions of any other government department.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE, addressing the International Baby Chick association in Kansas City, discussed at length the drought situation and the measures taken or contemplated for relief. He suggested this four-point program for the protection of both farmers and consumers:

1. Judicious commodity loans, especially in years of excessive supplies.
2. The ever normal granary.
3. Crop insurance.
4. Government purchase of land which definitely never should have been plowed.

SCATTERED rains over limited areas brought only temporary relief from the heat and drought, and then warm weather started a new advance over the corn belt.

The federal crop reporting board in Washington said the drought was as severe as that of 1934 and worse than any previous droughts since the western country was settled. The serious conditions prevailed over practically the entire area from the Rocky mountains in Montana to the Hudson valley in New York and southward over western Pennsylvania, central Maryland, the Ohio valley, parts of Arkansas, and most of Oklahoma.

It was announced in Washington that President Roosevelt had created a national committee to study measures for remedying conditions in the drought region through utilization of natural resources. The committee is headed by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Other members are Col. Richard C. Moore of the army engineers; John C. Page, acting commissioner of the bureau of reclamation; Frederick H. Fowler of the national resources committee; Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

IN OLYMPIA, Greece, scene of the first Olympic games, a torch was lighted by the rays of the sun and a Greek runner seized it and started it on a 12-day relay to the sports field in Berlin where the Olympic flame is to be lighted on August 1. Five thousand distinguished persons were selected to carry the torch, these including King Boris of Bulgaria, King Peter of Yugoslavia, and a long list of princes, statesmen and sportsmen. On the last leg it was to be borne by S. Loues of Greece, winner of the marathon in the games of 1896. A hundred thousand youths will accompany Loues in a parade to the stadium.

UNLESS the protests of Poland are effective, all opposition to Nazi power in the Free City of Danzig is due to be crushed. Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Danzig senate, which is controlled by Nazis, has issued administrative decrees ordering:

1. Dissolution of any organization whose members, with knowledge of its executive board, spreads news "endangering the state interest."
2. Prohibition of review by the courts of police measures of a political nature, including those aimed at the right of assembly, the press, and free speech.
3. Prohibition of Jewish ritual slaughtering for food purposes.
4. Imposition of three month protective custody on persons declared to be "endangering the public peace."

Thus the city's constitution is virtually set aside, and the Poles especially, having extensive economic interests there, are indignant.

REVOLT of the Cantonese against the Nanking government has collapsed and latest reports say government troops have entered Canton and taken over maintenance of peace and order. There was no opposition and the city was quiet.

Chen Chi-tang, the Canton warlord, deserted his followers and fled to Hongkong on a gunboat. There was a scramble to find Chen's alleged silver hoard, said to amount to many million dollars, but much of it is believed to be deposited in foreign banks.

EIGHT signatories to the Lausanne post-war treaty have granted to Turkey the right to remilitarize the Dardanelles, and they, with Turkey, have signed a convention covering the matter. Only Japan made slight reservations because it is no longer a member of the League of Nations.

Washington.—The steel industry of the United States has cast for itself a role in the forthcoming campaign—whether it intended to do so or not. The same is true of John L. Lewis and his segment of organized labor—and it is pretty generally suspected that Mr. Lewis intended to get labor questions well mixed up in politics. It is all more important because of President Roosevelt's attack on "economic royalists" in his Philadelphia acceptance speech.

Whatever rights the steel industry has or whatever rights Mr. Lewis and his followers have, the fact remains that they are all knee deep in politics and there is every reason to believe that each side will suffer in public esteem as a result. It means simply this: each side is mixing up problems that are basically economic in character with sordid, even unclean, political motives.

This outburst is prompted by two things: the gigantic steel industry has taken the position that it will defend itself against encroachment of professional labor leaders like Mr. Lewis and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and their satellites "from any source." The steel industry thereby has thrown down the challenge and now that such a die is cast, the steel industry will be compelled to do a number of indefensible things if it adheres to its program.

The same condition is to be observed in the organized labor situation. Whether Mr. Lewis is willing to admit it or not, his declaration that he will foster, even enforce, his scheme for organizing the steel workers is likely to lead to overzealous acts by his followers—and overzealous and foolish acts all too frequently lead to bloodshed.

For a number of years, steel companies have refused steadfastly to recognize union labor as represented by the professional leaders in the American Federation of Labor. They have attempted to defeat the inroads of that organization by forming what is known as company unions, groups of employees on the pay roll of each corporation. They have accorded to these groups the right of collective bargaining and have insisted that they would deal only with the representatives of the company unions for the reason that they believe they then are dealing with the employees concerned with questions of pay and working conditions in that particular plant. If the national unions were recognized, officials of a given company always have had to negotiate with the expert union negotiators who are paid by the national organization. The results have not always been happy. This combination of circumstances, together with a disposition on the part of the steel companies, I am afraid, to be rather selfish in their attitude toward labor has developed a continuing controversy that has raged over the last score of years.

It happened that the rather insolent announcement of the steel companies, their challenge, came almost simultaneously with the delivery of President Roosevelt's speech accepting the Democratic nomination for re-election. It was in this speech, it will be remembered, where Mr. Roosevelt denounced "economic royalists," in which he resorted to expressions bound to create class hatred and in which he used language that is certainly going to help discredit corporations which are large enough to attract national attention. Of course, I know that Mr. Roosevelt did not have the steel industry particularly in mind in his assault on massed capital but the effect is the same as though he had been shooting directly at the steel industry because of the coincidence mentioned above.

From all of the inside discussions that I have heard, it appears that the issue between the steel industry and its workers is no longer simply whether the steel industry shall be unionized. It is a question of how it shall be unionized. In addition to this, Mr. Lewis has been chiseling away for several years in promoting his labor union idea of organizing all workers in one unit instead of the craft union idea that is basic in the American Federation of Labor. That is to say, Mr. Lewis proposes to have a steel union or a shipbuilding union or a textile union instead of organizing the workers in accordance with the particular jobs they do, whether they be engineers, painters, carpenters, moulders or any one of the various other crafts.

The incident to which I have referred is an outstanding example of inconsideration and such things always cause citizens to have a hurt feeling, a feeling that the government changed the rules without consulting those who must obey the rules.

Since the steel industry has its company unions, there is a conviction in many quarters that Mr. Lewis might well pause to consider whether this is the time to carry forward his program of bringing steel workers under national labor union control. There are those who believe that the company unions eventually will become units in the larger labor structure of the country and, if that be true, it is made to appear that Mr. Lewis has hurt labor's cause.

On the other hand, the steel industry already is under attack by the government. Mr. Roosevelt suddenly "cracked down" on some of the major companies recently, charging them with collusion in bids on government work. He came out with this charge at a time which undoubtedly will stiffen the backbone of the union agitators—and it is not unlikely that by the same token he has stiffened the resistance which the steel companies will use.

Yet, it does seem that the steel companies made a fatal mistake in the pronouncement they have issued. There are too many people who will be inclined to believe that the steel companies have taken advantage of an apparent assurance of collapse of federal supervision. There are few who believe that the federal compulsory collective bargaining statute will last very long but the fact that this statute is due for the discard, it seems to me, hardly warrants the action which the steel companies have taken. They are no more warranted in that than union labor is warranted in taking advantage of the political situation to feather their own nest. A real danger, in addition to this, is that Communist agitators are going to use this situation as one vehicle for spreading their propaganda of dissatisfaction and discontent and Mr. Roosevelt's attack on massed capital unfortunately lends itself to the nefarious schemes of the Reds.

It long has been said that the method of administering laws frequently has created more dissatisfaction among the citizens than the requirements of laws themselves. Tax laws of whatever kind furnish a splendid example. It has always been true since we have had income tax laws that taxpayers have complained more about bureaucratic regulation, indecision, lack of uniformity in administration and, generally speaking, slow processes of settlement than about the amount they were required to pay. The same is true about our customs laws despite the fact that they affect fewer persons directly.

The other day the Treasury issued a notice to customs inspectors that was "effective immediately." It was a change in policy respecting the quantity of goods an individual may bring in from foreign shores without the payment of the customs tax.

Since 1798 or thereabouts, there has been a law which permitted a returning American to bring in commodities of whatever kind he desired, except narcotics, up to $100 in value but that law permitted the Treasury to make exceptions. The Treasury notice the other day was an announcement of an exception to this $100 exemption. It said that no inbound traveler could carry more than one wine gallon of liquor without the payment of the customs tax thereon. A practice had sprung up since the import duty on liquors has been made so high of returning tourists bringing in almost the full exemption in liquor alone. Probably the practice was getting very bad and no one questions the judgment of the Treasury in determining policy. But it is the method employed in making this change that has aroused criticism.

In ordering the new regulation "effective immediately," the Treasury forced upon hundreds of travelers the necessity for paying duty on their personal stocks of liquor in what amounts to a surprise order. They had left foreign shores under one regulation and arrive under another.

I have no doubt at all that the Treasury's reason for changing the rule while the game was being played will result in a considerable amount of revenue for the government. But there are many who believe, as I do, that the department in all fairness should have issued its regulation to become effective at some fixed date in the future in order that citizens who must comply with it would be prepared by proper notification of what they were expected to do and the penalties for failure to obey.

The incident to which I have referred is an outstanding example of inconsideration and such things always cause citizens to have a hurt feeling, a feeling that the government changed the rules without consulting those who must obey the rules.

This world is really no bigger now, than the palm of your hand wherever you are, news comes pouring in—Pullman car of the Mohave desert has the "Examiner"; flying across, the L. v. and brother hurry to the field at Wichita with the late "Beacon"; and on the ocean, newspaper appears every day the radio feeds it; in Paris, as published in New York tell anything you choose to believe from editorials written by men who do not know that the royal and imperial French families died and were buried after the war of 1870 to fiery-eyed moderns who think they can graft Karl Marx and Lenin on Jacques Bonhomme, the French peasant, and produce a French Utopia, with a Russian accent and a pair of high boots.

They do not know Jacques Bonhomme, who bought his land in the revolution at bargain prices with inflated assignats, and means to keep it, nor do they know the small-sized French bourgeois, who think more of one four-cent franc than some of our governing geniuses think of a billion 50-cent dollars.

The Marx-Stalin-Lenin brotherhood in America, by the way, does not understand the inside feelings of the U. S. A. citizen, with his bungalow, automobile, radio set, washing machine and furniture, "nearly paid for."

Send HIM, instead of a bill for his last installment, the statement: "No more private property," and see what he says and does.

You take your choice of dozens of Paris daily newspapers; the kind, that say anything and lose money; the tame kind, that say nothing and make money, but very little of it; the mummified kind that still take "Madame La Mousse" seriously, and think themselves back in the days of Madame De Deffand and Lord Binglebroke.

You have, also, newspapers from all the Lilliput countries nearby—English, Italian, German—and be news is in them, only you must know how to extract it. They are queer little newspapers, and if they be provincialism, make the most of it.

In London, for instance, Lord Rothermere's newspaper tells us that Mr. Eden, British foreign secretary, has gone to "a secret destination" in the country for a week's rest.

English statesmen always go to "a secret destination," for reasons unknown to Mr. James Farley, who relaxes at the ringside, of President Roosevelt, who rests fishing on a battleship, with fifty reporters on another ship, nearby.

You wonder that a man as young as Eden should need a rest. Gladstone, at nearly twice his age, was talking in the Commons at four in the morning—but Gladstone is a few, Tim Healey also.

Rothermere's writer thinks Eden is all tired out after his Geneva speech, telling just why England lifted the Italian sanctions. It was he who made a speech recently just as earnest and much louder, telling why those sanctions must NEVER be lifted. That was turning a big somersault. The English know how to do that, and you are supposed not to laugh.

Eden told Baldwin what the doctor said, and Baldwin said, "By all means, my boy, hurry off to a secret destination," and Eden hurried. In America, the businessmen would say, "Doctor, there are a few things that I must settle first, meaning, perhaps, his income tax. He would hang on and on, and finally go to a really secret destination in the graveyard."

Driving through Normandy, from Havre, where the ships land, would interest American farmers, especially any whose lands are "worn out" after comparatively few years of cultivation. On lands in this part of the world, wheat has been grown for three hundred years, and today yields better, bigger crops than ever.

In Rome, as in other places on the earth's surface, one city is piled on another. Dig down through centuries and the other appears. Invasions, plagues, famines and the grinding ice have wiped them out.

Those that read this today are the descendants of men such as the villagers of the Stone Age village, And still we are worried, looking down at the enemy, poverty, and may climb up and attack us in the age.

"Wasting my time," Barry told Harwood, the next morning, in the city editor's busy office at The Globe. "My time, and nearly a hundred dollars of the paper's money, Winslow had it straight. The Fane girl was strutting her stuff from one o'clock until long after the murder."

"Well, it's good to be sure."

"Yes, and I'm mighty sure now. Every step I've taken since our last meeting leads right up to Mrs. Kelly."

Harwood looked at him quizzically. "Step No. 1?" he asked.

"My advertisement offering a reward for the number of the cab that killed that artist's wife."

"You don't mean that you got it?"

Triumphantly, Barry opened his note book.

"There it is," he said. "026017. The figures under it are the number of the driver who gave me the information." Ernie copied both numbers.

"Swell work," he commented. "Anything else?"

"Lots. This fellow had a passenger who got out at Twenty-third street around midnight. When the woman was killed—two hours later—the driver bumped into him again in Sixteenth street, very much rattled, and looking as though he'd committed a murder."

"Any description?"

"Rather a vague one. That doesn't matter. I'm sure, in my own mind, that this passenger was the caller Kelly expected, and that he wasn't the murderer. I'm equally sure that he knew murder had been committed."

"Let's call it a mere supposition. In that case, Kelly was killed around two o'clock. At two o'clock, Mrs. Kelly wasn't in Harlem."

"How do you know that?"

Barry's answer was a full report of his adventures of Saturday. "Without Step No. 1, Step No. 2 means nothing. In other words, if Kelly'd been killed at midnight—which is the theory everyone's worked on—Mrs. Kelly's alibi would have been hopeless."

Harwood joined his finger-tips in an almost prayerful gesture. "I wish we could find the guy who looked 'as though he'd committed a murder.'"

Barry made no reply.

"That's always the trouble," the city editor went on. "What kind of a skate is this Luis Morano? Tough?"

"On the contrary. Cries over a mammy song."

"There's a heap of 'em do," Harwood philosophized.

"He's a Southerner, with a soft voice, and a funny impediment in his speech?"

"That so?" Harwood inquired. "Where is this Coconut Bar?"

Barry told him, and promptly returned to Mrs. Kelly. "How the deuce are we going to prove what she did after she got home?"

"That's up to you," Ernie said. "I'm off on a new tack now." His eyes twinkled. "One that would go a long way toward establishing your theory of coincidence. Gosh, I'd give my two uppers to break this story within the next week or two."

Thursday evening, Barry spent in his room, mostly thinking. He had telephoned Pat twice since their luncheon together, and found her enthusiastic over her guests. "There's nothing wrong with the boy," she declared; "nothing that a few weeks out here won't cure. He's on the bench now, with his mother."

Judge Hambidge had taken to the little fellow at once. Almost like having a grandchild. It kept his mind off his worries. And no one could see Peggy, being brave, but always staring at nothing, always thinking of what might happen, without pity that warmed into affection. "She's really an awfully good sort," Pat said, from Southampton. "I like her a lot. When are you coming out?"

"Tomorrow, I hope."

"Well, we'll expect you for dinner." That breach was healed, all right. Pat had called him "the scum of the earth." In the same hour, he remembered again, he had told her he loved her. As to that, she still maintained silence. "That's the kindest thing she could do," Barry thought. "A Judge's daughter, and I—"

Barry had learned not to think of the future. "Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum," as his own father had put it. Just for now, it was pleasant to be somebody who knew Pat—and he wanted to take that awful look out of the other girl's eyes. Barry thought. "If I could get that Filipino to talk. He knows when Mrs. Kelly came home, and he's probably got a darned good idea what she did afterward. If we could get to that Oriental—"

At which point, Evans came, and he had been drinking.

"Sorry, sir," he apologized, taking the nearest chair. Evans had none of Willetts' compunctions. "Sorry, sir, but I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur."

"Liquid nourishment?"

"Yes, sir," Evans admitted, sheepishly. "But that was the only chance I had with that Irishman."

"Well?"

"Well, I drove Miss Hambidge, and Mrs. Rogers, and the boy to Southampton, like you said. And I started back today. It was nearly eight when I made the garage, and I was good and hungry."

"There's a decent cafe a few yards away. Nolan—that's Kelly's chauffeur—was sitting at a table, with a load he ought to've gone twice for."

Evans smiled.

"Ed had a grouch on women in general. And he was chowed plenty. I hadn't been with him long when he opened up on Mrs. Kelly. There's something queer between her and this Filipino, he says."

"Charlie?"

"That isn't his name, but let it go at that. And, when Ed said 'queer,' he didn't mean anything wrong. Just some kind of an understanding. Mrs. Kelly's been giving the Chink coin and jewelry, regular. Charlie showed him some of it, Ed says."

"Well, the night of the murder Nolan drives Kelly to the Coconut Bar. And home—at nine o'clock. When he gets out at his house, Kelly says, 'Put the car in the garage. Mrs. Kelly's gone up to Harlem, and I won't need you 'til tomorrow morning.'"

"Ed obeys orders. He goes back to Kelly's, and sits in the kitchen. This Chink is in the butler's pantry, getting a tray ready. And while the two of 'em are down there, the damnedest row starts upstairs—"

"Rogers and Kelly."

"No. This was around nine o'clock. Mrs. Kelly. She was laying Mike out so you could have heard it a block.

Ernie Copied Both Numbers.

Well, this goes on for ten or fifteen minutes, and then the bell from the parlor rings. Charlie starts upstairs with the tray. He gets up two steps, when Kelly appears at the head of the flight. "Come up here, you lousy spy. Come up here while I tell you where you get off!"

"Charlie sets down the tray, and goes. Nolan follows into the pantry, and has a stiff drink. Then he sits down again, and listens to Kelly laying out the Chink."

"Could he hear anything? Words, I mean?"

"No. Just Kelly's voice. Mrs. Kelly was out of it. She'd gone to her room. Nolan thinks. But Kelly made noise enough for two. And, after another ten minutes or so, Charlie comes back.

"I'm fired," Charlie says—in the Chink lingo. "I got to get out. That blankety-blank told me to go quick, or he'd kill me."

"Are you going?" Nolan asks.

"Sure," the Chink says. "I got to get my money first. He chased me out of the room when I asked for it, but I'm going back," the Chink says.

"Nolan then took the cook to a movie, and when they get back, everything's quiet. It's after midnight, because these two walked home. Kelly's upstairs, talking to somebody, and the Chink's in his room, packing and muttering to himself something frightful. So Nolan says good night to the cook, who goes into her room, and then Nolan slips into the pantry, and takes another shot of that hooch."

"What hooch?"

"The rye whiskey I was telling you about."

Barry sprang from his chair.

"The rye whiskey?"

"Sure. And it was in a cut-glass decanter."

"Are you certain?"

"Nolan is. And he's just as certain that it was still in the pantry when the guy upstairs left."

"Why?"

"Because he heard the front door close ten seconds before he went out the back way."

"Gosh!" Barry exclaimed. "That puts it up to Mrs. Kelly, all right."

Evans shook his head, drunkenly.

"Mrs. Kelly wasn't home," he said.

"She went to her sister's after the high-jinks in Harlem, and Nolan got her there the next morning, before they called the police. There were only three people in that house after the guy went who was visiting Kelly—"

Kelly himself, cook, and a mighty mad Chinaman."

"Filipino."

"Whatever he was, he was mad, and the decanter that killed Kelly was downstairs with him until just about the time Kelly was killed."

"Thanks," Barry nodded. "I think we've got something."

"Oh, I forgot to give you this. It came—to Southampton—just as I was leaving," said Evans.

"This" was a cablegram. Alone, in the smoke-filled room, Barry opened it. Nine words. "Father and I sailing for home Sunday. Love. Mother."

For an instant, he stood, frozen, the wire in his hand.

Directly before him, an evening newspaper lay open on the table.

"Out-going passenger and mail ships," he read. "Sailing tomorrow—Steamship Orange Nassau. For Port-au-Prince, La Guayra, Curacao, Maracaibo, Carapano, and Pampatar. I'm on my way to one of 'em tomorrow!"

CHAPTER IX

Barry's panic was short-lived. Between him and the sailing list had come a vision of Peggy, with beaded lashes screening eyes forever staring at nothing.

"I can't do it," he said to himself. "I can't run away and leave that girl in the lurch. Nor Pat either. I've tackled this job, and I've got to go through with it."

"Anyway, it begins to look as though the end were in sight. If Ridder sails Sunday—"

He went back to the shipping news. "If Ridder sails Sunday, that's the Bremen and she's due here the following Saturday. That gives us eight days. I'd better see Winslow."

He called Peter next morning, but the attorney was in the country. "Left last night," his secretary reported, "and won't be back until Monday."

Barry had a dinner engagement at Southampton. "We'll start things humming on Monday," Barry told himself. "I've got my house to put in order, too. Ridder's house, that is."

Evans telephoned around ten, and before noon they were on their way to Southampton. "My last week-end with Pat," he was thinking. "Where'll I be next Saturday? Out of luck, and out of a job. In jail, maybe, and in the newspapers. That's my finish with—everybody."

There was a new atmosphere at the Hambidge's. Pat had been right in telling Jack that he'd "cheer my father up a lot." "They're building a railway on the beach," she laughed, when the boy—sunburned, and active—joined them before dinner.

"You must go to bed now," Pat bade him, "if we're to take our ride in the morning. We have a canter every day before breakfast," she added to Barry, ringing for a maid to take charge of the youngster. "I discovered the dearest little pony in the village, and the man brings it over at nine o'clock, with another horse for me. Jack's getting to be a regular Buffalo Bill."

The strained expression of a week ago was beginning to disappear from the face of Judge Hambidge. But the greatest difference was in the boy's mother. Naturally imitative, as Barry had remarked, she had been quick to observe and emulate Pat's moderation with make-up. Her speech, too, had lost all but an occasional inadvertent reference to "guys" and "dames." She had stopped staring into space. "What's the news about Jack?" she asked, quite calmly.

"Free next week," Barry declared ringingly.

At the dinner table, in spite of herself, Peg caught some of the contagion of Barry's new confidence. Nolan's story sounded like the solution of everything, they agreed. "We've got to get Jack out before Saturday," Barry said. "His father'll be home then."

Both women looked up at him.

"What'll happen to you?" Peggy asked.

"The main question," Barry urged, "is what's going to happen to Peg. And Jack. And Jacky."

"We'll meet that when it comes," Peggy returned, steadily. "But now I'm worried about you."

She excused herself early, with the plain purpose of leaving Barry with Pat. But the Judge stayed on. His legally trained mind had been busy with the Nolan disclosures.

"If Mrs. Kelly slept at her sister's, why didn't she say so to you? It would've been her best alibi."

"Yes, but it would have involved admitting that she'd had a run-in with Kelly."

"That's true," Hambidge admitted. "But Nolan was drunk last night, you say. And some parts of his story simply don't hold water. I don't believe there was anything 'queer' between Mrs. Kelly and the Filipino. Kelly's finding that out wouldn't account for his calling the man a 'lousy spy,' would it?"

"No," Barry retorted. "But listen. If the Chink was a 'lousy spy,' he got paid for it, didn't he? Wouldn't that explain Mrs. Kelly's giving him 'coin and jewelry'? And everything else? The Chink's reporting Betty Barclay's message, and all the rest of it? I tell you, this story's as straight as a string. Betty Barclay went on the road with her show about the time Mrs. Kelly sued for divorce. I found that out some time ago. She got back the day of the murder, and phoned Kelly. Mrs. Kelly learned of that from the Chink, and lit into Mike. Then Mike lit into the Chink, and the Chink killed him. I think we can prove that."

The Judge shook his head.

"Anyway, it certainly establishes reasonable doubt of Jack's guilt."

"They can't convict Jack," the Judge insisted. "Peter says so, and I've never known Peter to be wrong when he made an assertion like that. But acquittal means waiting for the trial, and waiting for the trial means that Jack will still be in jail when his father returns."

Pat remained silent, but, the next morning, on the beach, she drew Barry away from the little group engaged in railroad construction.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

THE death of Thomas Meighan may not mean very much to the younger movie-goers, but it will shock those who remember him as one of the big stars of the days of silent pictures. Like many stage stars, he was not too sure at first that he would like pictures.

But he did "The Miracle Man" and with it hit his stride. Oddly enough, Lon Chaney made his name in that picture too. And so did Betty Compson, who was finding it none too easy to climb the ladder of fame.

Nobody suspected that "The Miracle Man" would be such an epoch-making picture as it was. But it established its three leading actors as stars almost overnight.

And speaking of star-making pictures, see what's happened to the people who appeared in "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth."

Charles Laughton

But since then Laughton, Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Wendy Barrie and Binnie Barnes have been welcomed by Hollywood. All have been extremely successful in American pictures.

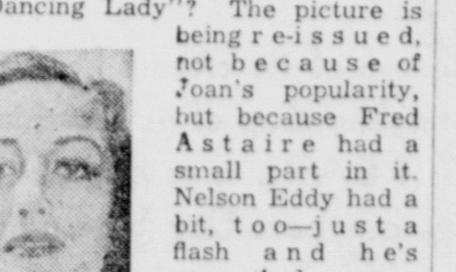

Since her marriage Jean Parker has been luckier than many Hollywood brides; she has had assignments that provided a pleasant honeymoon. First they went to Texas, on location with the company that was making "The Texas Ranger"; now they're off to Mammoth lake and the mountains for "King of the Royal Mounted." Now all she needs is an engagement with some company that's headed for Honolulu, Hollywood's pet honeymoon spot.

Joe Penner is going to make that picture at last. And because children have become sure-fire hits on the screen, he'll be assisted by Patsy Lee Parsons, a five-year-old who sings and dances. The dancing teachers of this land ought to give Shirley Temple a medal or something. Everywhere—even out in the country where you wonder where and how they can take dancing lessons, you see little girls doing tap dancing nowadays. And Shirley is responsible for that!

Just one more story of the way things happen in Hollywood. Samuel Goldwyn wanted a German actress for a role in "Come and Get It." He was sure that none of the local talent measured up. So he had old German films run off for him, for days and days, in the hope of seeing exactly the right actress in one of them. If he found her, of course he'd have to find out where she was, and put her under contract, and have her brought to California at once.

He found the girl in a picture called "Frederika" and the wheels began to turn. Then it was discovered that she is Mady Christians, who has been right in Hollywood for two years, yearning to make a lot of pictures but not getting too many assignments.

Remember Joan Crawford in "Dancing Lady"? The picture is being re-issued, not because of Joan's popularity, but because Fred Astaire had a small part in it. Nelson Eddy had a bit, too—just a flash and he's gone. And now see what fame the gentlemen have attained on the screen! Fred Astaire has achieved an unprecedented

Joan

popularity in the gay night club type of vehicle; Nelson Eddy has become the idol of millions of movie goers as well as radio listeners.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Don't miss "The Moon's Our Home" if you want to see a very funny picture. . . Richard Arlen has just entered the Vancouver $5,000 golf tournament; he'd rather golf than eat. . . Joe E. Brown and his wife went to Peoria, Ill., for the opening of his picture, "Earthworm Tractors," Peoria being the world's tractor center. . . This last year in radio has proved that the public doesn't care any more for programs that depend on gags instead of funny situations. . . And the fact that Ed Wynn failed to regain his former popularity is one proof of it. . . Rubino (and his violin) turned down an offer to reappear with Eddie Cantor. . . Constance Bennett, Simone Simon, Loretta Young and Janet Gaynor will work together in "Ladies in Love"—and Hollywood looks for displays of temperaments from at least three of them before the picture's finished.

There are few village smithy shops today under the chestnut trees. One reason

A Village is that there aren't Blacksmith any more chestnut trees. Another is that the motor car is rapidly driving horses and vehicles drawn by horses out of business.

I used to think that in fifty years or more practically all the village smithies would disappear. But lately I have learned better.

Here in a little town in Maine is a village blacksmith who has more work than he can do, though he has probably not shod a horse or repaired an agricultural implement in twenty years or more.

For a time after the "devil wagons" began crowding horses and horse drawn vehicles off the road, he had little to do.

Then one day he saw some ornamental grill work that had been sent to his town to be used as an adornment on a new building.

He examined it carefully, then went home and thought a little. "There is no reason in the world why I cannot do that kind of work," he said to himself. "I will do it, by Gosh."

Today the children still "love to see his flaming forge and hear the bellows blow."

Over the anvil on which he used to fashion horse shoes he makes

Plenty of Comfort in This Youthful Culotte

Pattern No. 1922-B

The perfect antidote for blistering, hot days is this cool, cleverly-designed culotte for bicycling, riding, beach, housework; for tearing through the woods, or running down the street to the grocer's.

Designed for plenty of action and comfort, it fits snugly at the waist by adjustable laced ribbons at each side, with the same feature repeated in the blouse front. A becoming boyish collar and handy pocket create charming effects. The pattern is so easy to follow, you can cut two at once using printed cotton, gingham, broadcloth, seersucker or linen at an expense even lower than your budget provides.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1922-B is available for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. Send 15 cents in coins.

beautiful things of steel and iron. Visitors seeing him at work have come in to inquire if his handiwork was on sale.

He assured them that it certainly was, and that more of the same kind of work would be in evidence as soon as there was a demand for it.

He is known today all over the state, and in many other states, whose residents have bought his work.

And if he had the advertising gift that some people have he would have a wide reputation.

But not, I am sorry to say, a great business.

For his work is artistry, and cannot be done in quantity over a single anvil.

It cannot be said of him that he is another Benvenuto Cellini. He works in iron, not in silver and gold.

But he is a master craftsman, which he never might have become had he not been forced by changing conditions to become something besides the village blacksmith.

I saw him at work the other morning on a pair of beautiful andirons.

I asked him what they cost.

"A lot of time," he said.

"Yes, but how much money?"

"Oh, not so much. But the fellow I'm making them for isn't rich so I wouldn't like to charge him too much."

And there was proof that he really had the soul of an artist.

Quite a number of Hondo people attended the funeral of the late Joe Droitcourt at LaCoste and Castro-ville Sunday, mention of which is made in our Castroville column. The Managing Editor of this paper feels a personal loss in the untimely death of this man. In his early career as a newspaper man, Joe was in his employment for several months and never, in all his experience, has he had a steadier, more reliable or more honest employe. He has ever esteemed him highly, and feels that the world is poorer for the passing of this man whom he has been proud to claim as a friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollie Scott and three children, Helen, Olivia and Kempf, were up from Devine on business Monday, and while here were pleasant callers at this office.
The Managing Editor had not seen Mrs. Scott since he ran the old Anvil in Castroville where he knew her as Alvina Kempf, then a little girl.
Mrs. Scott's father, Henry Kempf, then employed as a miller by Jos.
Courand, afterwards moved to Devine where he died as the result of an accident a number of years ago.
Her mother died a few weeks ago.

Tom J. Bendele was a business caller at this office Saturday. Mr.
Bendele was selling some delicious peaches as we ever tasted, grown on seedling trees of his own planting on his farm. Mr. Bendele's success with his fruit shows that any farmer with a spot of ground adapted to fruit, where the trees can be cared for and protected, can grow a plentiful supply on his own ground.

Judge and Mrs. H. E. Haas, Mrs.

Ever hear about the new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight? It's a great conno extra charge.

Railroad trains are running on faster schedules these days.
Seems like the iron horse wants to show these new streamlined diesels that he can step out, too.
Both passenger and freight schedules have been speeded up.

What's more, the railroads believe in "safety first."
Last year not one passenger

QUIHI NOTES.

And Abraham took the wood the burnt offering, and laid it Isaac his son, and he took the and a knife; and they went together. Gen. 22: 6.

Every step and every act touching dramatic and eating to the of the heart; yet nothing promised, nothing for effect and fanaticism. Just the father and son in a lonely walk up the hill the pyre, the funeral pile, the rrible sacrifice. The son with easy, carefree heart, full of at a novel outing; the father with deathbell ringing in his heart, every step getting harder, pining to go on? Is he pressing his feet to the rugged ground, pining to go on? Is he pressing the finis of the woe? The ser-at the foot of the hill had been in substance, "We'll be back."
he see a way out, the Lord's out? Did he start nursing hones, had he become inconsol-of fact, a new man was there. Things had been going much his way up to now; this mand to offer his son cut him from all the moorings of natures and anticipations. Now he to grow into an entirely new on life and future, following leader with a heavy, yet not de-ing heart to an uncompromising duty. No argument or proof was ferred, why the act was demand-and how the Lord would marshal a happy ending. Arguments will fect the intellect only, and this influence his conduct, but it does give the power to enlargement new convictions. These musings under the strain, the test, the ence. His God might have armaneuvered, persuaded him into sacrifice. He does not; He gives the suggestion, the command as He does today, as did Jesus sowing the "seed," as the "Word" broadcast into the hearts from pulpit and otherwise, and this sprout and grow in the process your reasoning, in the ripening your thoughts, in the budding of convictions in the light of truth urging you to walk in that light, by force but by your own volunand obedience. See the mighty marching via Moriah to victory.

And here is the outline for the next League program: Recitation the Misses Florence Grell, Ed-Loessberg; select readings, Mr.
Arnold Lindeburg, Emil Mumm-ical selections, Miss Della Hartman, Mr. Walter Grell; instrumental number, Miss Hertha Weeber. The friends hope for the very best.

No, it was not the most solemn processions when we had to be pulled back about 18 miles to town for pairs. There are two sides to the famous mountain trips. At events, it's advisable to take a to eat along, in order to bridge the waiting time from 7 A. M. to 9 P. M. We'll try again, better equipped.

Others fare with better results.
Mrs. Jacob Breiten, for instance, her first vacation during a long
She reports a most enjoyable trip without mishap of any kind, but noisy, turbulent city is not her choice. And we trust that Mr.
Christ, Nietenhoefer and family have an even more impressive to the exposition at Dallas to get a eyeful of the treasures stored there.
If that work in daily routine go out vacationing for a while, no other would make up their mind for a tour somewhere. Still, there are such that find a fine substitute—so they go, often far away, as Mrs. Hy. Bohlen, taking in Arizon-for quite a while already, we hear.
Happy times, we hope. On the other hand, some of our folks are on the receiving line and harbor pleasant guests. Thus did the F. Boych-family enjoy the presence of their daughter, Mrs. H. Balzen, of Seguin.

As a late event, we heard of the successful operation that Mr. F. F.
Mumme went through at San Antonio with his eyes. Indeed, his is ours.

On their return from here to their home in Chicago last week, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brucks visited the Centennial Exposition at Dallas. While there they met an enterprising newspaper man who, learning that Mr.
Brucks is a native of Belgium, featured the couple in his paper as the "foreigners" taking in the sights.
Since Mr. Brucks is a native Texan, he wants it understood that he is not a Belgian—only a brother-in-law to them, so to speak. These marital troubles, it seems, don't all fall on "Mr. Polly Moran!"

Mrs. J. H. Burgin and daughters,
Misses Dorothy and Helen, and son,
Ervin, have returned from the Centennial. They report being there during the storm and experienced some exciting moments. They came last by College Station and visited C.
Burgin who is in the Entomology Dept. They came home by way of Corpus Christi where they made a short visit.

In the District Court, 38th JUDICIAL DISTRICT,
Medina County, Texas,
LLOYD PARSONS
VS.
GEORGIA E. PARSONS.

The State of Texas to the Sheriff or any Constable of Medina County—GREETING:

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMAND-ED, that by making publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Medina, once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, you summon Georgia E.
Parsons, whose residence is unknown, to be and appear at the next regular term of the District Court of the 38th Judicial District of Texas, held in and for Medina County, to be held at the Court House thereof, in the town of Hondo, on the first Monday in August A. D. 1936, the same being the 3rd day of August
A. D. 1936, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 1st day of July A. D. 1936, in a suit, numbered on the Docket of said Court, No. 3435, wherein Lloyd Parsons is plaintiff, and Georgia E.
Parsons is defendant; the nature of plaintiff's demand being substantially as follows, to-wit: Suit for divorce on the ground of cruel treatment. Plaintiff alleges that he is now and has been for more than twelve months next preceding the filing of this petition an actual bona fide inhabitant of the State of Texas, and has resided in Medina County, Texas, more than six months next preceding the filing of this suit. That he was married to defendant on the 14th day of June, 1935, and that said marriage relation still exists. That he and defendant lived together until October 24, 1935, when he was compelled to separate from defendant and they have lived separate and apart from each other since said date. That immediately after their marriage defendant began a course of nagging and fault-finding without any cause or provocation on the part of plaintiff; that she repeatedly expressed a violent dislike for plaintiff and stated that she did not like Texas or anyone in Texas; that she refused without cause to cohabit with plaintiff; that by reason of the neglect by and conduct of defendant, plaintiff became ill and nervous and suffered great mental and physical pain, and that is insupportable for him to further live with defendant as his wife. That plaintiff does not know the present whereabouts of defendant. Plaintiff asks for a divorce and general and special relief.

HEREIN FAIL NOT, but have you before said Court on the said first day of next term thereof this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

THE NEW IDEA OF CANCER.

MANY CASES CAN BE CURED IF REPORTED PROMPTLY.

Bulletin No. 10
American Society for the Control of Cancer 1250 Sixth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

THE SURGICAL TREATMENT OF CANCER.

Surgery is the most scientific branch of medicine, and in no direction is surgery capable of greater accomplishments than in cancer.

Standard procedures exist for the surgical treatment of cancer in nearly every part of the body. The operative technique employed by one surgeon is practically identical with the procedure used by another.

There is no secrecy about the surgery of cancer. Nobody has a proprietary method or an exclusive instrument. What is done by one surgeon or at a given clinic is known to all. Through meetings of their great associations, by means of their profusely illustrated journals and by visits of investigations and study the surgeons of one country are made familiar with the work done elsewhere. All over the United States, as in Europe, skillful surgeons are available to perform what would have been regarded a hundred years ago as miracles.

Surgery is the main weapon with which civilization is seeking to combat cancer. It is used as a preventative and cure. It is employed as a preventive when it removes precan-cerous conditions and as a curative when it eliminates the cancer itself. Not uncommonly radium or x-rays are employed in connection with surgery. They share with surgery the honor of first place among the weapons which can be used against the disease.

It is a relic of barbarous times when unreasoning fear is allowed to prevent a patient from getting the benefit of surgical treatment. It is reminiscent of the days before anaes-thetics were employed, before aseptic operations were performed.

The Time To Cure a Cancer Is When It Is Beginning.

If you think you have any of the symptoms described in these articles you should be examined by your doctor or at a hospital at once.

CLINICS".

"FIRST COME—FIRST SERVED" AT BIG GARNER DAY BANQUET.

Dallas, July 29.—One of the biggest parties ever staged in Dallas will be held Wednesday night, August 5, in honor of Vice President John N.
Garner. Centennial officials have declared. The banquet, to be held at the Baker Hotel, is a feature of the extensive Garner Day program planned by the Centennial Exposition.

As motor caravans were being organized in many cities to bring thousands of Texans to Dallas on that day, Centennial officials emphasized that the banquet will be a "first come—first served" affair and urged Texans to send checks or mail orders for tickets promptly to the Vice President's Reception Committee, Box 598, Dallas. Dinner is two dollars a plate.

LIVE STOCK REPORT.

(Federal-State Market News Service)

Cattle, receipts 500, calves 700.
Receipts were comparatively light on the San Antonio market Monday with a liberal proportion of calves included in the run. Trading on all classes was active and most classes held fully steady with few lots tippy calves strong to 25 cents higher than last week's mean close.

Bulk of the good fat calves and light weight yearlings cashed at $6.00 to 6.25 with odd lots to $6.50

MARION DAVIES IN 'PAGE MISS GLORY' CURRENT FILM.

Charming Marion Davies, who appear at the Colonial Theatre Friday and Saturday in "Page Miss Glory," her first Cosmopolitan Picture to be released by Warner Bros. Supporting Miss Davies is a remarkable all star cast of famous "name players," including Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Mary Astor, Frank McHugh, Lyle
Talbot, Patsy Kelly, and others.

The story is as funny as it is unique. Miss Davies, in the role of a country girl, neither pretty nor bright, gets a job as chambermaid in a swanky New York hotel in which reside a promoter, portrayed by Pat O'Brien, who has nothing to promote, and Frank McHugh, a jobless newspaper photographer. McHugh, learning that an advertiser is offering a big cash reward for a photograph of America's prettiest girl, makes a composite picture, blending the features of famous stage and society beauties and submits it under the name of "Dawn Glory." He wins the prize and trouble starts. A "Dawn Glory" craze sweeps the country and even Miss Davies falls for it with startling results. Properly attired and "made-up" she becomes the reincarnation of Dawn Glory, but all she wants to be is the sweetheart of Dick Powell. The action is fast and furious.

DEVINE NEWSLETS.

From The Devine News. FIRST CAR NEW CORN OUT THIS WEEK.

Matt A. Keller, the Korn King and general manager of Adams Co., announces that the big sheller and elevator will put out a car of corn before the end of the week, and so far as he now knows it will be the first in the state. He got out the first last year on July 28th. The dry weather the past few days has helped cure the corn and started broom corn harvest in a big way.

SHIPPED THREE CARS POPCORN TO IOWA.

Irrigation farmers, Adams, Young, Horton, Schulse and others, loaded out a car of husked popcorn last Thursday, in a refrigerated car for shipment north. We understand that a car was loaded at Natalia and one at Lytle. The farmers got $2 the hundred and the corn weighed out heavy in order to catch an early market north. It was the big yellow variety.

FROM YANCEY.

Mr. Stanley McAnelly and family of Ranger were here for several days week before last.

Miss Dora Mae McAnelly returned from Denton last week, where she was a student at C. I. A.

Mr. Roscoe Banks of Runge came in for a visit with friends for several days and will probably remain longer.

Mr. Jesse E. Merrifield of Uvalde was in Yancey last Friday on business.

Mr. Floyd Homesley of Deer Creek Community was here last Saturday and reported his uncle, Mr. Willis Langford, having been injured by a cow.

A Mexican child of Mr. Harrison Wilson's place developed a case of tetanus. No cause could be found that might have brought on the malady.

The ice cream supper at the Methodist church brought out a good many folks. The weather was threatening and several times it began to sprinkle early in the evening, but by nine o'clock the weather cleared up, and a large crowd assembled. Cream and cake sold netted something over $25.00.

Mr. August Bohnfalk took his daughter, Miss Lucille, to Hondo Sunday for medical attention.

The families of Messrs. Lee Ward, W. B. Ward and Emil Bohnfalk attended the Alto Frio Encampment for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Muennink were accompanied by Mr. Lawrence Wilson to San Marcos last Sunday.

Nerves

Do they torture you by day?
Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES.
What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves

Do they make you Cranky, Blue—give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still.
Nerve Strain brings on Headache.
Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion.
There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves

Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal.
You can't have a good time when you are nervous.
You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The SAN ANTONIO BUSINESS COLLEGE announces the following substantial additions to the faculty and personnel:

Dr. E. H. Smith, A. B., M. Accts., Phd., who will teach Higher Accounting and Business Administration, comes to us from Strayer's College, Philadelphia, one of the largest and most successful commercial schools in the United States. President Strayer, who expressed a great desire to retain Dr. Smith permanently, recommends him without reserve.

Dr. Smith has had many years of successful experience as teacher and executive, and his professional and business experience includes the practice of law and accountancy throughout this country, and the instructing and coaching of many successful applicants for C. P. A. certificates. He is a member of several accountancy and law organizations including the Bar of several States and the United States Supreme Court Bar.

Dr. Smith has decided that he prefers San Antonio to any other city for his permanent residence, and his acquaintance of over 20 years with the San Antonio Business College and its president, Ramon T. Flores, were important factors in making this decision.

Mrs. W. K. Smith, B. S. C., A. B., head of the Secretarial Department, also comes from Strayer's Business College with the highest possible recommendation as to her character, personality and teaching ability. Mrs.
Smith's experience includes about ten years teaching secretarial subjects in city high schools and commercial colleges; also as secretary of bank officials and other persons prominently connected with leading professional and industrial concerns.
Her value as secretary, and teacher of secretarial subjects has been evidenced by several special awards and complimentary expressions from the various Gregg organizations and their leaders.

Other members of the faculty remain as heretofore.

HONDO COPS TOURNAMENT OPENER.
The Hondo Bronchos came out victorious in the opening game of the Semi-Pro and Amateur baseball tournament played at Tech field Sunday night before approximately 550 baseball fans.
The Somerset Pioneer Oilers were the victims of the strong Hondo team, bowing to the Bronchos by a 2 to 1 score. Harold Nester pitched a five-hit ball for Hondo, having a slight edge on Mose Dixon, veteran hurler of the Oilers, who gave up six blows. The entire Hondo team showed up well, giving Nester fine support.
The Bronchos, under the management of J. G. Barry, will be strong contenders for the championship.
Thursday night they meet the Bell Furniture Men, leaders of the Spanish-American league of San Antonio in the 1st game of the quarter-finals. Should they win this game they will enter the semi-finals on Saturday night. The tournament ends Sunday night when the winners of Saturday night's games tangle in the final and deciding game. A large silver loving cup will be awarded the winning team by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, who is sponsoring the tournament.

The free show on College Square Saturday night, sponsored by Gaines & Kollman, Chevrolet dealers, was an entertaining and instructive one—just such as the Chevrolet people always render.
Joe Steidle was over from Dunlay Wednesday and while in Hondo paid this office a business call. Mr. Steidle spent last week-end hobnobbing with the other postmasters in convention assembled in San Antonio.
Wilfred Wernette was over from Castroville Monday on election business. From Mr. Wernette we learned that many of the corn fields around Castroville are over-run with rats and they are rapidly destroying a great deal of the grain.
Mr. and Mrs. D. B. McManus of Thomaston and little grand-daughter, Ann McManus of Louisiana, and Miss Stella Stone arrived here Sunday on a visit to Clyde Stone and friends in Hondo. Mr. and Mrs. McManus have returned home, but Miss Stella remained in Hondo to spend a part of her summer vacation.
Emil Britsch again offers his services to the people of Medina County as their District Clerk in a formal announcement printed elsewhere in this paper. Mr. Britsch has filled this position efficiently for the past several terms and hopes the people will reward him with their continued confidence and re-elect him at the November election.
"I am feeding 150 goats, 20 head of cattle and 30 hogs on the silage that I put in my trench silo last fall, and they are doing far better on it than on any other roughage I have ever fed," says Jim Sessions of Free-stone county, according to J. W. Richards, Jr., county agricultural agent. Sessions dug the silo last fall and stored a 12-acre crop of hegari in it. He states that the total cost of this feed did not exceed $1 per ton. This included the cost of growing the feed, building the silo, and storing the feed.

I will pay the above reward to any person for the first conviction for stealing my sheep or goats. 10tpd.

Appealing in a quiet way is the Paramount film, "Girl of the Ozarks", which comes to the Colonial Theatre Monday and Tuesday. Another little girl comes up for stardom, Virginia Weidler, who plays a little mountaineer branded as a liar. She lies colorfully to her teacher and lies tenderly to her sick mother. She is sent to a state institution but in the end everything comes out all right. The cast includes Henrietta Crossman, Leif Erickson and Elizabeth Russell.

YANCEY FACULTY COMPLETE.
Yancey, Texas, July 27, 1936.—At a special meeting of the school board Saturday evening, July 25th, Miss Mildred Young of Goliad was elected to fill the position as Home Economics teacher in the Yancey High School. This completes the faculty for the ensuing year. All teachers have been elected subject to placement by the superintendent, and include, in addition to Miss Young, the following teachers previously elected or re-elected: High School, A. L. Smith, H. H. Lock, Ethel Morrison, Francis Forbes; Grammar School, Frankie Wiley, Helen Scott, A. E. Smart, Aulthalia Williams, Leona Baker.
The Yancey Schools include a fully accredited high school with nineteen and one-half units of affiliation, sixteen units being the prerequisite training for college entrance. The classification of this school is of several years' standing, and particular effort has been directed toward the provision of adequate vocational training peculiar to the local needs. In addition to the usual academic subjects, the school is accredited with three units in Vocational Agriculture, and two units in Vocational Home Economics. Work will be submitted for two additional units the ensuing term in the commercial subjects, probably Bookkeeping, Commercial Geography, and Occupations. These courses will be submitted with a view toward the eventual provision of a complete commercial department.
The County School Board in co-operation with the local board has approved a re-routing system for the three buses which serve the district. This re-routing will tend to facilitate the delivery of pupils and extend the transportation service. The members of the local board are: J. N. Wilson, President; A. J. Hardt, Secretary; W. Faselier, H. L. Saathoff, F. W. Bohmfalk, E. S. Bohmfalk, and J. P. Nixon.

By L. L. STEVENSON

It was 55 years ago. William Steinway, founder of the piano house that bears his name, had just been elected first president of the Liederkranz society, an organization of music-loving Germans that has sung its way down to the present day. On him fell the duty of selecting a site for the home of the society. Two properties were available at exactly the same price, one at Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street and the other adjoining it on Fifty-ninth street. Mr. Steinway gave due consideration to the advantages and disadvantages of both. In the end, he decided that the inside plot was more desirable. His reasoning was simple and direct. A building on a corner necessarily would have more windows than one on an inside plot. In those days, windows had to be washed just as they do now. So, with an inside building, the upkeep would be less.

Other singing societies, including the Arion and Fidelio, came into existence and Park avenue frontage was acquired. Thus, the start of "Harmony Row," the name by which the properties are still known. Also, later, a 15-story apartment house was built on the corner. The other societies gave up and for some time the Liederkranz has been seeking other quarters. Recently, the Columbia Broadcasting company acquired "Harmony Row" and will build a new home on it. Thus, in a way, "Harmony Row" will be preserved. The new building will have frontage on both Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street and will be L-shaped. And the thrift of the first Liederkranz president is the reason.

Encountered an old friend out at Coney island—Rosy. She was the star of Billy Rose's "Jumbo" but when he took the show down to Fort Worth, he left Rosy behind. For some time, she was a lonely prisoner in the basement of the old Hippodrome. Now she's billed as "the sacred white elephant." I first met Rosy years ago. The school children of Detroit contributed their pennies to buy an elephant for Belle Isle and I was commissioned to make the purchase. That necessitated visits to the Hagenbeck depot over in Hoboken where Rosy was on sale. But the decision was in favor of a young elephant that would grow up with the children, hence Sheba. But I got so friendly with Rosy that she ate my straw hat. I guess an elephant never does forget. At any rate, the instant she saw me out at Coney, Rosy reached for my Virgin islands panama.

Always learning something through conversing with taxicab drivers. For instance, whenever a taxi driver leaves his cab to eat a bite, do an errand or anything else, he takes out his card bearing his picture and number and places it carefully in his pocket. A police regulation is the cause. The license might be stolen and put to some improper use. So, if a cop comes along and finds it unguarded, he confiscates it. In order to get it back, the driver has to go to the licensing bureau. There it is either returned or a duplicate is issued. But—and hence all the care—the driver is barred from driving his cab for the next three days.

Still another bit of knowledge was that drivers for some companies must show a fixed amount on the meter when they turn in their cabs. If they don't, they are not allowed to take out a cab the next day. So, the driver, seeing he hasn't reached the minimum, pulls down his flag and drives until he makes it up, the difference coming out of his own pocket. That practice is known as "riding the ghost."

Leave it to a New York youngster to spot a chance to pick up a bit of change. Daily, a bunch gathers at Canal street where automobiles line up waiting to enter the Holland tunnel. They sing to car occupants who toss them small change either as encouragement or to induce them to stop. But no matter the reason, on busy days, some are fortunate enough to go to their homes with jingling pockets.

Vogue of Black or Dark Silk Sheers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS to foremost fashions for summer, costumes of black or dark sheers such as silk chiffons, marisettes, organza and hand-some nets are carrying first honors.

Your wardrobe may be as you supposed replete with chic, but if it be sans one of the beguilingly styled dark sheers better send an immediate S. O. S. call in to your dressmaker or to your smartest store in town or to whoever caters to your sartorial needs. Telling you, we are, that without a suit or a dress of some one or other of these silk sheers or nets in black or in brown, navy or duobonnet red or deep purple dye your summer dress program will be sadly lacking indeed. We might add that black is the favorite of them all.

Especially are fascinating things being done with redingote fashions made of silk sheers that are thin to the point of transparency since they are designed to be worn over either a dress or slip in a solid bright color or of gay print. See the charming and chic ensemble to the right in the picture. It conveys the idea most eloquently. Here a black silk chiffon redingote with the new circular-cut hem-line is posed over a pink silk moire slip. Very French in feeling is this most winsome 1936 afternoon dress. Note the black silk taffeta applique of roses on the redingote. The corsage of huge twin roses accurately repeats the pink tone of the silk slip. Narrow velvet ribbon ties about the waist and trims the very lovely pink panama hat worn with this costume.

While we are on the subject of black silk chiffon and its importance in the summer style picture it might be well to mention the new skirts of black chiffon which are the smartest ever for evening, worn with a tunic or jacket-blouse done in flamboyantly colorful flowered print. These skirts are cut full circular and their hemline measures yards. Yet with all this fullness you are not made aware of the fact as the skirt is styled to fit about the hips in slenderizing sleekness gradually and gracefully leading into soft undulations about the hemline. You will find a skirt of this description to be a real asset in your summer clothes collection. Have in reserve a shirtwaist blouse of black net, also a decollete bodice of self black chiffon—an economical way to acquire a wardrobe of smart formals for varied occasion.

If you have an urge for color you will find joy in a costume that poses a redingote of duobonnet red silk chiffon or organza over a slip of gorgeous flower print. The color effect is beyond the telling in word or picture. It requires the evening lights to glorify it. Could anything in the way of a daytime costume be smarter and more to be coveted than the jacket-and-dress twosome to the left in the illustration? If so we have not discovered it. You may be interested in knowing that this ensemble is of royal lineage in that it is a creation by no less a noted designer than the personal dress-maker to Queen Mary. It came over on the R. M. S. Queen Mary as did a whole fashion load of stunning modes. The dress is perfect for afternoon wear on warm summer days, made as it is of cool Tudor-brown twytex net. The finely pleated and tucked jabot is of white silk net, and the loose coat is of brown crossbar twytex.

The story of net as it unfolds in the summer style program is proving a most fascinating one. Nothing smarter or more practical has centered the style stage than the jacket dresses tailored of cool and comfortable and chic looking nets either in black or the stunning new rich dark colors.

DINNER SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The vogue for tailored clothes goes into the evening. Very stylish indeed is the young woman in the picture who wears a strictly tailored dinner suit with its 1890 jacket and buttoned skirt. It is fashioned of creamy white Mt. Airy cloth.

QUILTED COATS FOR BEACH WEAR LATEST

A coat which looks as though it were made from the family's heirloom quilt will go a long way toward creating a sensation on the beaches. Dressier versions that have intricate quilting patterns are destined for wear over summer formals.

Large floral motifs which have bright colors on white or pastel backgrounds are the most fashionable for beach wear. Some of these coats are made of printed cottons which have the designs outlined with quilting, while others are pieced together in the regulation quilt manner.

The quilted coat of plaid woolen, very light of weight and quite gay in its color combinations, is shown for vacation wear, while the taffeta and hand-blocked linen versions are evening favorites.

Flowers Are Dramatic

White flowers on a black gown are dramatic; and on a white gown they emphasize an effect of simplicity. A spot of brilliant scarlet on a white gown is gorgeous. Color harmony may be achieved by wearing flowers that blend into the general tone of the costume, or with a contrasting complementary color.

Flowers Deck Shoes

Shoes have become so fancy that one widely-known Paris house shows street shoes trimmed with applied flowers in contrasting colors and a belt and purse to match.

Smart Household Linens

Pattern No. 5348

Let us do a bit of "garden-ing." It's linens we're going to beautify, with cotton patch flowers and flowerpots. This easy applique is sure to enhance a pair of pillow cases, scarf or dainty hand towels. Take colorful scraps, cut them into these simple flower forms, and either turn the edges under and sew them down, or finish them in outline stitch. It's called "Linen-closet Gardening!"

In pattern 5348 you will find a transfer pattern of two motifs 5½ by 15 inches, two motifs 4¾ by 15 inches and the patterns for the applique patches; material requirements; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches needed.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

All Around the House

Grease the measuring cup before measuring sirup or molasses and the ingredients will not stick to the sides of the cup and there will be no waste.

Always sweep rugs and carpets the way of the grain. Brushing against the grain roughens the surface and it tends to brush the dust in instead of out.

Partly cook cereal in a double boiler the night before using and leave it on the back of the stove, being sure to cover well with water. It will be well cooked in the morning.

Sugar sprinkled over the tops of cookies or sponge cakes before putting them into the oven forms a sweet crust and makes a richer cookie.

Cloths saturated with polishing liquids and stored away in closets often cause fires through spontaneous combustion. Store the cloths in covered tin or galvanized cans.

Cocoa should always be cooked in a small amount of water before milk is added.

If you wish to avoid bean rust, do not pick beans when the dew is on them or after rain.

The Canny Poet

This peep at Longfellow, as a business man, is permitted us by Caroline Ticknor in "Glimpses of Authors".

In November, 1855, soon after "Hiawatha" had been published and was selling madly all over the country, a Boston newspaper dared to criticize it adversely. Soon criticisms concerning the source of "Hiawatha" and accusations of imitation were made by newspapers from coast to coast.

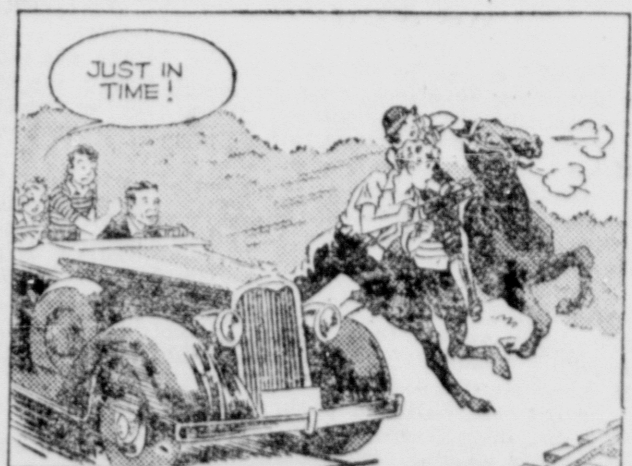

Longfellow's publisher, James T. Fields, was greatly annoyed. One day, bursting into the poet's study, he exclaimed:

"These atrocious libels must be stopped!"

Longfellow said quietly, "By the way, Fields, how is 'Hiawatha' selling?"

"Wonderfully! None of your books has ever had such a sale." "Then," said the poet, calmly, "I think we had better let those people go on advertising it."

Look Outward On Your Vacation

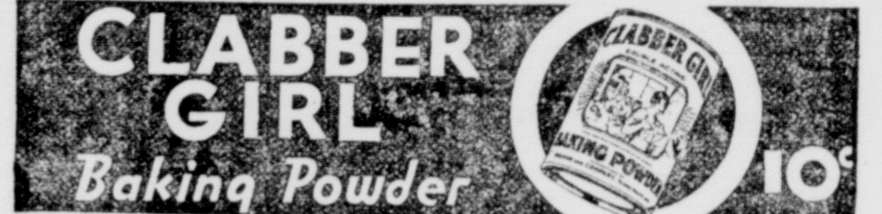

There is no other rejuvenator equal to a vacation taken in the right spirit. If you go away with your mind filled with your business, your profession, your household cares, your studies, or your plans for the future, and if you keep thinking of those things, you might as well stay at home. If your eyes look inward instead of outward; if your ears still hear the hum of the factory and the noise of the busy streets; if you carry with you the burdens and perplexities which have been pinning you down and robbing you of sleep and comfort, you will gain nothing from your outing.

Best of Two Egotism is not so bad. It may spare one from many a despairing mood.

Just the light you need for every outdoor use... Coleman Lamps. It makes and burns its own gas from regular gasoline. It's a big value, with years of dependable lighting service, for only $5.95.

D'HANIS PLAYERS IN BASEBALL TOURNAMENT.

Although D'Hanis has no official baseball team this year, six of the former Pirates showed up well in the opening game of the semi-pro tournament at Tech Field in San Antonio last Sunday night, when Hondo defeated Somerset in a 2 to 1 victory. Harold Nester pitched for the winning Bronchos, with Joe Finger on the first base. On the line-up of the Somerset Pioneer Oilers were Allen Koch, 3b; Mitchell Koch, ss; Thomas Finger, cf, and Joe Finger, c.

D'HANIS TO CELEBRATE.

The annual home-coming celebration and dinner of the D'Hanis parish will be held this Sunday, August 2, in their parish hall. In addition to the usual fine barbecue dinner, other amusements will be ready for the entertainment of the visitors. The celebration is the occasion for many people to renew old friendships and D'Hanis is the mecca of visitors from all over the county and from San Antonio and other cities.

LIBERTY OR DEATH.

Since recorded history began some centuries B. C., the need has ever bred the man to die for liberty.

While common herd in shackles slept, a few immortal braves, Unselfish, sleepless vigil kept, to free the limbs of slaves.

Except the greatest sacrifice within the human ken,
When Galilean paid the price to free the souls of men,

No greater deed was ever done in time of mortal strife,
Than when William Barrett Travis won, by giving up his life.

The freedom of a people bound by oppression's galling chain,
That tyrant's heel had ground to earth in misery and pain.

In tribute to their leader great, all hail the little band,
That one-to-fifty, shared his fate, to free a stricken land.

Execration on the thoughtless throng that left a fated few,
Alone to right a grievous wrong, alone to duty do;

Alone, as at the Alamo, when was heard the fateful sound,
Of the dreadful "deguello" among the hills around.

Brave hearts devoid of gladness, within the Alamo,
Were not bowed down in sadness, by fear of mortal foe;

But by neglect of faithless friends, their cry for help to heed;
By faithless friends who failed to lend them help in time of need.

Had others lent a helping hand, had been as leal and true,
As did the heroic little band, the brave Gonzales few,

A different story had been writ about a people freed,
Though not detracting e'er a bit from glory of the deed.

But there would be no sacred pile of battered, crumbling stone,
As warning to the world the while that here from earth had flown

Such spirits of heroic dead as the ages come and go,
Would cause the bowed, uncovered head, to reverent tribute show.

—R. R. CLARIDGE.

V. E. Jones, Lynn county agricultural agent in his annual report says that the J. T. Owens family of the Edith community made a net profit above feed cost of $319.28 on turkeys produced during 1935. The Owens family started the year with 10 breeding hens. One hundred and sixty-two poult were hatched and 131 of these reared to market size. Fifty-six of these birds were sold live weight, all grading number one, for $184.48. Fifty-one were home dressed and sold strictly on a quality basis. Forty-one of these graded prime and 19 choice goods. These 14 turkeys brought $180.50 and 12 were kept for breeding purpose and 12 of a late hatch are still on hand to be marketed. "These turkeys," according to Jones' annual report, "were fed a balanced ration consisting principally of milo, corn, bran, shorts, meat scraps and milk. This ration was fed all during the growing and fattening period. In addition, the turkeys had excess waste grain around the barn and lots."

Shipments of poultry and eggs from Texas to interstate points in December were sharply below those of the corresponding month of 1934, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research reported. Aggregate shipments of 437 cars were 19 per cent below the 539 cars in December of the preceding year. There were 395 cars of turkeys against 175 in December, 1934, a decline of 17 per cent; chickens, 15 cars against 52 cars, a drop of 70 per cent; and eggs, 27 cars against 12 cars, an increase of 125 per cent. Turkeys were shipped to 22 different states and the District of Columbia. It was noted in the November analysis of turkey shipments that a sharp decline occurred in forwardings to eastern markets. The same situation prevailed again in the December shipments. On the other hand, there was a slight increase in shipments of turkeys to Chicago. Receipts of 22 cars of eggs in Texas from other states were less than half the 51 cars received during December, 1934.

Terracing to stop the washing and fill up the ditches in his field is the first step that A. N. Beasley of the Adiana community in Lee county has taken in restoring the fertility of 50 acres of his farm. Beasley aptly describes the fertility of his farm when he states that today 25 acres are necessary to produce as much corn as 10 acres did when he put the land in to cultivation. This land was very difficult to terrace, as the major portion of the farm sloped from both sides to the center of the field where a large ditch was forming. This ditch, if not prevented, would take out 10 acres of good land. The land had an average slope of eight percent and in the last 15 years had washed down to the clay.

The planting of 159 native shrubs and the setting out of 175 cuttings of shrubs and evergreens is the yard improvement work reported by Ruth Kemp in her demonstration yard this spring. Ruth reports that her father has plowed her yard and leveled it with a drag and harrow and that she has transplanted five rose bushes into her rose garden and has out one hundred rose cuttings. She has two red buds, one cedar, one French mulberry, six dogwood, ten New Jersey tea, two red haw, twelve black haw, two yucca, six elder berry, four sumac, one honey locust, four cottonwood and one hundred coral berries which she used in screen plantings to cut off the view of the service buildings of her home.

Texas comprises one-twelfth of the area of the entire United States. Texas is larger by 83,000 square miles than France. The only European country with an area larger than Texas is Russia.

FLY CONTROL PREVENT BREEDING.

By Texas Department of Health.

Thousands of children and adults die every year from diseases carried by the fly. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, summer complaint, cholera, intestinal diseases, and frequently death follow closely in the trail of the common house fly.

"The control of the fly menace comes at the top of the list of necessary public health measures which should be applied by every city and community in the State," urges Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

The most effective measure for control is to prevent breeding," he said. "Flies breed in filth, and about eight days are required to complete a life cycle. During her life time of several months, one house fly lays from 600 to 1000 eggs. Thus it can easily be seen that in a season which usually begins in the spring of the year, the descendants from one fly number countless thousands.

"To eliminate flies the breeding places must be destroyed. Manure piles, garbage, and other organic filth furnish the requirements of warmth, moisture, and food necessary for the propagation of the fly. Flies should be kept from contact with food or drink or utensils in which such food and drink are prepared and served. Likewise they should be kept from access to privy vaults where they pick up the infections, which they later spread to humans by contact with the food and drink, and by unwashed hands and utensils.

See that your windows, doors, and porches are screened so that the stray fly from some careless neighbor will not molest your family. See that your grocer keeps meat, vegetables, and fruit screened from flies.

"Organize health measures to destroy the breeding places, control the flies' access to your home and food, and establish standards of cleanliness in your community that will eliminate the fly."

FOR SUMMER APPETITES.

Attractiveness in food is most essential in warm weather when the appetite inclines to flag; therefore, one must make an extra effort to secure variety either through wider use of foods or through use of more methods of preparation.

EMERGENCY BISCUITS: These are a modification of regular baking powder biscuits and are made by using a larger proportion of liquid so that the dough is too soft to roll and is dropped by spoonfuls into muffin pans and baked in hot oven 10 to 12 minutes.

CABBAGE SLAW: Shred 1-2 head of cabbage; marinate with 1-3 cup of vinegar to which is added 1 t salt and 2 t sugar. Prepare 2 cups medium white sauce using 2 cups milk, 2 T butter, 2 level T flour, 1-4 t salt. Mix flour with equal amount of milk and stir until smooth; add remainder of milk, melted butter and salt. Heat, stirring all the time, until the mixture thickens. Remove from fire and pour over marinated cabbage. This may be served hot or cold.

CREAM CORN SOUP: Prepare a white sauce of 2 cups milk, 2 T butter, 4 T flour, 1-2 t salt; add 1 cup canned corn. Heat thoroughly. Add more milk or water to secure the consistency desired when the liquid boils away. Serve hot in hot soup bowls.

PEACH SHORTCAKE: 3-4 cup milk, 2 eggs, 3-4 cup sugar, 1-2 t salt, 1-2 cup butter, 2 cups flour, 3 t baking powder, 1-2 t salt. Add baking powder and salt to flour, cream butter and sugar. Add eggs well beaten. Then add milk and flour alternately. Beat thoroughly. Bake in layer cake tins 15 to 20 minutes. Use fresh or canned peaches for filling, putting peaches between layers and on top. Fresh peaches must be sweetened to taste.

120-ACRE FARM FOR SALE.

A well-improved farm of 120 acres, 8 miles north of Hondo, with good 4-room house, large barn, out-houses and good well with windmill, for sale reasonable. For price, terms, and other particulars see GEO. H. KIMMEY or FLETCHER DAVIS, Managers, HONDO LAND CO.

FOR ASSESSOR AND COLLECTOR OF TAXES.

In submitting my candidacy for the office of Assessor and Collector of Taxes at the next November election, it is a deep sense of gratitude that impels me to express my appreciation to the voters of Medina County for their liberal support and for the confidence they have reposed in me in the past. It is my purpose to stand on my record since coming into that office, and may I offer that a faithful discharge of public duty in the past is the best guarantee of a promise to perform a like service in the future. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully,
L. E. HEATH.

FOR DISTRICT CLERK.

To the Voters of Medina County, Texas:
I hereby respectfully announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of District Clerk in the General November Election. And I wish to also express my sincere appreciation for the honors and favors conferred upon me in the past and promise that if elected, I will continue to render prompt and efficient service, to the very best of my ability.

Sincerely yours,
EMIL BRITSCH.

CASTROVILLE, TEXAS, TUESDAY, JULY 28, 1936

JOS. O. DROITCOURT.

Mr. Jos. O. Droitcourt died at LaCoste on Saturday, July 25, 1936, eleven o'clock A. M., after an illness of some months duration.

Mr. Droitcourt was born at Castroville on February 2, 1882, but at his death, in 1902 he was 54 years, 5 months and 23 days old. He was married to Miss Annie Monaghan, who preceded him to the grave five years. Of their union five children were born, namely: Mr. Julius Ahr of LaCoste, Alvin Droitcourt of San Antonio, Mrs. Ed. Tschirhart of Castroville, and Mrs. Theo. Trip of Macdonia. He leaves surviving him eleven grandchildren; four brothers, Jacob of Antonio, John, Fritz and Otto, Droitcourt of Castroville; three sisters, Misses Olga, Cecil and Hetty Droitcourt of Castroville; besides many other near and dear relatives to mourn his passing.

After services at LaCoste Sunday at 4 o'clock P. M., the body was brought to Castroville and rested at St. Louis hall, where it was viewed by many who knew him living. Five o'clock the remains were conveyed to the Catholic Cemetery and buried, where he now rests in peace from his earthly labors and suffering to arise on Judgment Day, to leave a host of sorrowing relatives and friends who are sorely grieved to hear of his passing.

To his brokenhearted and bereaved children, brothers and sisters, we extend our sincerest sympathies in their hour of sorrow. May a Heavenly Father comfort them in their great bereavement. May rest in peace.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to take these moments to thank all our friends and neighbors who so willingly assisted us during the long illness and on the death of our beloved father, Joe Droitcourt. We also wish to thank all those who brought flowers and for the spiritual floral offerings as well as those attending the funeral. For kind shown and the sympathy expressed we shall ever be grateful.
